The following tables exhibit the full returns on the vote for Governor and Mayor in this City by districts of Wards. The figures under the head of "Scattering" combine the votes for the Temperance and Labor Reform candidates. The tables are so arranged as to indicate the comparative strength of LEDWITH and HOFFMAN in the City, and also to show the proportions of votes to the registries of this year and of the election of 1868. The registry of 1868 is given only by Ward totals, as the changes in districts since then make a comparison in detail impracticable:

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ON COMPARATIVE LONGEVITY IN MAN AND THE LOWER ANIMALS. By Dr. RAY LANKESTER, B. A. London: MACMILLAN & CO. 1870.

This treatise, which has lately received a prize from the University of Oxford, contributes several new ideas and classifications to the subject. "By longevity," says the author, "must be understood the length of time during which life is exhibited in an individual." But this obvious definition prepares the way for novel discriminations between the different quantities of life that may be considered: "Firstly, various individuals enjoy various durations of life. That men, cats, mice, bees and buttercups live for different periods of time is matter of experience; and not only this, but all men do not live equally long, nor all cats, nor all bees and flowers. Hence, every individual has its own longevity, if we understand that term to mean duration of life. On looking a little further, we readily discover that there is a closer agreement as to duration of life (though we cannot deal with accurate numbers) between the individuals of the same species than there is between the individuals of different species; and, though the individuals of the same species exhibit great variation in their length of life, yet there is a probable duration which characterizes the species, and is the same, therefore, for all the individuals. We thus, then, have individual and specific longevity."

LANKESTER further divides specific longevity into "average longevity," or the average duration of life of all the individuals of a species; in other words, the expectation of life at birth, and the potential longevity, or the normal "lease of life" of the species, unaffected by accident or disease. The term "mortality" may be called the converse synonym of the average longevity. The average longevity, however, of a group of individuals is but slightly related to their potential longevity. "From enemies preying upon the young, from disease, from a severe struggle for food, or from the accidents of dispersion, vast numbers of the individuals of the group may die at a very early age. Those, on the other hand, which survive, may live to a period of time quite unaffected by the conditions which acted on them in early stages of existence. Thus, from great destruction of young, the average longevity may be brought very low, and not indicate directly at all the potential longevity," or natural capacity of life in the species. To determine this more important datum, the normal longevity of any species, it then becomes necessary to estimate "the probable after-lifetime of an individual when it has attained the average longevity of the species," or else "to use the probable after-lifetime of an individual at that age when it has passed some crisis, such as the maturity of the reproductive organs." But the idea of longevity must be further subdivided in order to be profitably investigated. "Man may take an animal or a plant, and by removing the agencies to which the creature is born, and carefully substituting others, may cause it to live much longer than it could possibly do if left to its natural conditions. Thus man may take a bird, and by providing it with food, and protecting it from competition with its fellows, from accidents and enemies, and from the want caused by weakness in old age, protract its life. Parrots, thus, live even one hundred years, and goldfinches twenty-three, which, there is good reason to believe, is far beyond their length of life when in a state of nature. Many plants by attention are made perennial or biennial, whereas in natural conditions they would be annual."

Hence there is one limit to life which is proper to the species, under the conditions which nature actually supplies, and another to which the care of man can protract the duration of life, the limit beyond which no power that we know can extend it. The first period LANKESTER calls "Normal Potential Longevity," the second "Absolute Potential Longevity."

We have, then, these three qualities of life—the average, the normal, and the absolute or potential longevity. The normal life period may be divided into three elements: First, the period of evolution, (including in this term both growth and development;) second, the period through which reproductive activity is spread; and, third, the period of dissolution or decay.

What are the causes that favor longevity? In the first place, high individuation, i. e., complex structure and large bulk; and, second, small expenditure. Expenditure is of two kinds—that involved in the wear and tear of obtaining and assimilating food, and generally carrying on the life, and that involved in the propagation of the species. By diminishing or increasing either of these we favor or we antagonize longevity. Expenditure of either sort uses up the matter of life—the protoplasm, as HUXLEY calls it—and hastens the period of natural decay. Each individual has thus a store of life material, accumulated in youth, expended in age. The aim of hygiene is to make this supply last as long as possible beyond the mere average limit of life, and to attain, as nearly as possible, the limit of the potential, or utmost possible longevity. But nothing can relax the physical laws which fix the absolute longevity of the individual.

LANKESTER'S account of the actual duration of different forms of life is interesting. We quote the best established points:

Insects.—The image lives from a few hours to six months, dying on reproduction. The larva lives from a week to four years or more. A man in London, with performing fleas, finds that nine months is a very great age for them to attain.

Fish are not known to get feeble as they grow old. BUFFON saw a carp in a pond of the Comte de MAUREPAS that was 150 years old and lively. The pike has attained a probable age of 267 years, and the salmon of 100.

Reptiles.—The tortoise attains 175 and 200 years; crocodiles even a greater age. Fish and reptiles do not die, strictly speaking, from old age, but from mechanical or accidental causes—their size increasing, like that of trees, as long as they live.

Birds, like mammals, may die of old age; their growth is limited. Parrots, "which are unquestionably," says Mr. LANKESTER, "the very highest of birds in development, live probably the longest." Instances are well authenticated of their reaching the age of 120 years. The falcon and the raven probably exceed the limit of a century, and the goose attains it.

Mammals.—The general cause of death is the same as for birds—the actual exhaustion of the life forces. The Greenland whale lives probably for 250—400 years, as inferred from the growth of the baleen. The Asiatic elephant certainly lives 120 years, and probably sometimes even four times as long as this. The horse lives 25 years; the Bishop of Metz had one, however, that reached the age of 45. The ass is longer lived. The camel attains the age of 40-100 years. The ox 15-20 years: the bull, 16 years; the sheep and goat, 12 years; the dog, 10-34 years; the cat, 9-18 years. Man—The average age of Englishmen dying at 51 and upward ("normal potential longevity,") 75-5 years.

The Chinese division of human life is interesting. The age of 10 is called the Opening Degree; 20, Youth expired; 30, Strength and marriage; 40, Officially apt; 50, Error-knowing; 60, Cycle closing; 70, Rare bird of age; 80, Rusty visage; 90, Delayed; 100, Age's extremity. FLOURENS'S division is more scientific: 1-10 years, Infancy: 10-20, Adolescence; 20-30, First youth; 30-40, Second youth; 40-55, First manhood; 55-70, Second manhood; 70-85, First old age; 85-100, Second and last old age.

It is surprising to learn how few are the well-authenticated cases of longevity exceeding a century. The cases constantly reported as such rest, almost without exception, upon report, and not upon registration. Sir CORNEWALL LEWIS and other writers upon this subject have gone so far as to doubt the possibility of man's longevity exceeding one hundred years; and the cases of PARR, JENKINS, and others hardly less famous, have been clearly shown to rest on no proper evidence. Still, it is clear that CORNEWALL LEWIS has reached, in LANKESTER'S words, "a fanciful conclusion" in arbitrarily limiting man to one hundred years. The fascination of numbers has had some share in this. There are well-authenticated cases of persons who have exceeded this age, as those of WILLIAM SHULDHAM, who lived from 1743 to 1845, and of THOMAS HART DAVIES, who was 109 years old at death, as proved by the registration of baptism. But Dr. LANKESTER says that, "on à priori grounds, he would not deny the possibility of a longevity of 120 years."

A well-known resident of this City is referred to in Dr. LANKESTER'S work as among the remarkable instances of longevity. Born in 1766, this gentleman claims to remember seeing Dr. SAMUEL JOHNSON in the streets of London; and he is three years the senior of the twelve great men who were born, as if to corroborate astrological doctrines, in the year of the last transit of Venus. Probably no other single year ever produced such imperial names as those of Napoleon, Soult, Ney and Wellington,—Brunel, Mehemet Ali, Turner, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Châteaubriand and Castlereagh,—Cuvier and Wm. von Humboldt,—men who revolutionised science, art, politics and affairs. Alexander Humboldt, the brothers Schlegel, Coleridge, Southey, Campbell, Byron, Lamb, Moore and other great men that seem to belong to a distant past, were younger than this remarkable Englishman by a still greater number of years.

The volume closes with various tables of longevity, which substantiate the following conclusions:

1. The average longevity of man has immensely increased in Europe since the early ages. But this simply means that early mortality has been checked, and that society now saves a large proportion of the feeble and sickly children to a sufficient age to take part in its affairs.

2. There is no proof that the normal longevity of man, i. e., his expectation of life after puberty, has been at all augmented. No gain in human vitality is demonstrated; though the author, as a professed adherent of the doctrine of evolution, does not deny the probability that such a gain has taken place.

3. Savage lives are very much sorter than civilized. German, American and French lives are shorter than the English. Sovereigns are short-lived. Women have, especially in advanced periods of ages, a better expectation of life than men. The clergy, medical men, lawyers, literati and artists are long-lived in the order named.

THE ORIGIN OF CIVILIZATION AND THE PRIMITIVE CONDITION OF MAN. MENTAL AND SOCIAL CONDITION OF SAVAGES. By Sir JOHN LUBBOCK. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co.

The present volume is the second in a series of works by the same author, of which the purport is to illustrate man's earliest history. The first in the series treats of pre-historic times; the present work, and a third which is to follow it, are devoted to the collation of facts respecting the condition of the inferior or less developed races. The subjects already discussed are the social and mental condition of savages, their art, their systems of marriage and relationship, their religions, moral character and laws.

"We have much difficulty in realizing," says the author, "the extreme mental inferiority of the lower savages." GALTON, in his African travels, found tribes of such limited intelligence that they could not count beyond two. The wild men of the interior of Borneo are found living "absolutely in a state of nature; who neither cultivate the ground nor live in huts; who neither eat rice nor salt, and who do not associate with each other, but rove about the woods like wild beasts; the sexes meet in the jungle or the man carries away a woman from some campong. * * These poor creatures are looked upon and treated by the other Dyaks as wild beasts." (p. 5.) And LICHTENSTSIN thus describes a Bushman: "One of our guests, who appeared about fifty years of age, who had gray hair and a bristly beard, whose forehead, nose, cheeks and chin were all smeared over with black grease, having only a white circle round the eye, washed clean with the tears occasioned by smoking—this man had the true physiognomy of the small blue ape of Caffraria. What gives the more verity to such a comparison was the vivacity of his eyes and the flexibility of his eyebrows, which he worked up and down with every change of countenance. There was not a single feature that evinced a consciousness of mental powers. When a piece of meat was given him, and, half rising, he stretched out a distrustful arm to take it, he snatched it hastily and stuck it immediately into the fire, peering around with his little keen eyes as if fearing lest some one should take it away again; and all this was done with such looks and gestures that any one must have been ready to swear he had taken the example of them entirely from an ape."

By an ample collection of authorities, including not less than 200 of the principal voyagers and explorers who have left a record of their observations, LUBBOCK is enabled to draw a vivid picture of the principal phases of primitive life. All savage life is primitive life,—the life that the ancestors of the most civilized races led; for societies "do not advance concurrently, but at different rates of progress;" and we are, therefore, even yet in a position "to watch and describe the infancy of mankind." By this overlapping of the different strata of social development we are made, in a sense, contemporaneous with the earliest ages; we are enabled to study the phenomena presented by races that are as yet separated by a narrow interval, at least in mental power, from the higher members of the brute creation, on the one hand, than from ourselves on the other; and the purport of LUBBOCK'S very able treatise is to show at once the immense depth from which the modern civilizations have sprung, and the still greater distance to which, so flexible and susceptible of development is humnan nature, the highest civilizations may yet expect to rise. As the geologist studies the deeper portions of the earth's strata by means of the upheavals and subsidences which bring them to the surface, so the student of sociology finds the remotest antiquity brought before his eyes by these solutions of continuity in historic development. LUBBOCK'S work is among the ablest specimens of the modern method of scientific inquiry as applied to the study of man's evolution upon the planet.

THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF RELIGIOUS BELIEF. By S. BARING GOULD, M. A. Part II. CHRISTIANITY. New-York: D. APPLETON & CO. 1870.

DISCOURSES ON THE RATIONALITY OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION. By Rev. ADIEL SULLIVER. Boston: HENRY H. & T. W. CARTER. 1870.

SWEDENBORG AND MODERN BIBLICAL CRITICISM. By Rev. EDWIN GOULD, M. A. Boston: HENRY H. & T. W. CARTER. 1870.

DOCTRINE OF THE LORD IN THE PRIMITIVE CHRISTIAN CHURCH. By S. F. DIX. Boston: HENRY H. & T. W. CARTER. 1870.

We group these volumes together not because of any special affinity between them, but because they are, in common, the outcome of one of the most pronounced tendencies of the present age—that, namely, which seeks to reconcile the dictates of reason with the truths of revealed religion. The variety of methods by which this is sought to be effected, is characteristic of the transitional period in which we live, when old things are passing away and the new have only partially appeared to occupy their place. The empire which the severe methods of modern science have gained over the thought of our time, is more or less visible in them all, while the necessity of disputing the supremacy of merely physical truth forms the chief reason for their existence.

The Origin and Development of Religious Belief is a reprint of the second instalment of a somewhat remarkable book. The author has employed the "pitiless" logic of HEGEL for a purpose that could have astonished no one more than the philosopher himself. HEGEL'S dogma of the impossibility of knowing the absolute save through an intermediary, is made the fundamental axiom of an argument which seeks to prove Christianity by a reference to the wants and limitations of man's nature. Viewed from a strictly judicial standpoint, the auther finds that neither miracles, prophesy, history nor scripture can furnish satisfactory evidence of the mystery of the Incarnation. In default of unimpeachable testimony from these witnesses, the author concludes that to every Christian the evidence for the central fact of his belief is to be found in "his own nature, crying out to see God face to face, and live." The union of divinity with humanity is held to be necessary, in order that man's nature "may find its complete religious satisfaction, in order that there should be an adequate basis for morals," a secure foundation for the rights of man, a correlation between authority and force, a conciliation between the duties a man owes to himself and those he owes to his neighbors, and an adequate incentive to progress. Thus, on a basis strictly rational, the author proceeds to define the sphere of the Bible, the Church, and the various developments of Christian belief. Without hazarding an opinion upon the success of his effort in the region of faith and dogma, we readily concede to him the praise of having written a very suggestive and original book.

The Discourses of Mr. SILVER are based upon what is called the "New Jerusalem," or Swedenborgian system of faith. The author expounds his views with much clearness and no little ability.

The treatise of Mr. GOULD on Modern Biblical Criticism is another effort to expound the views of EMMANUEL SWEDENBORG in reference to the canon of Scripture. There is the usual amount of arrument from philosophical analogy and natural symbolism, which are so much in favor with the new Church.

The treatise of Mr. DIX is an attempt to show from the works of the ante-Nicene Fathers that the Primitive Christian Church believed in what the author calls the "Divine Humanity" of our Lord. The book is another sample of the prolific literature of Swedenborgianism.

—The prospectus of the proposed publication of a translation and popular adaptation of SECHTER'S celebrated work on the theory of harmony has appeared over the signature of Mr. C. C. MUELLER, at SCHIRMER'S, and subscriptions in view of its intended issue are being received. The English student of harmony need hardly be told that obscurity of plan and of language is the principal characteristic of most text-books on this subject. The advantages claimed for the new work—which is entitled "The Correct Order of Fundamental Harmonies; or Of the Fundamental Bass and its Inversions and Substitutes, by Simon Sechter, formerly Organist to the Imperial Court, and Professor of the Theory of Harmony in the Conservatory of Vienna"—are that it renders perfectly intelligible the essential difference between consonances and dissonances, and shows all the consequences which naturally arise therefrom; that it furnishes such clear and certain rules for the entrance and succession of the fundamental and inverted chords as are found in no other work; that it gives plain directions how to construct real and apparent, i. e., passing chords, and how to distinguish the former from the latter; that it presents a clear view of the subject of Suspensions, illustrated by a great number of examples, and, finally, that it furnishes unerring rules for changing diatonic into chromatic chords. Mr. MUELLER'S translation and adaptation of the work has been commended by Messrs. BERGMANN, THOMAS, MASON, MILLS, BRISTOW and TIMM, and the two artists first named have declared it to be the best and clearest treatise and guide on the themes indicated.

—The North American Review, October.—Whether the settlement of the Alabama claims question is to be long delayed or not, any calm and dispassionate review of the whole subject, from competent sources, must be acceptable. Mr. MOUNTAGUE BERNARD, Chichele Professor of International Law and Diplomacy in the University of Oxford, has endeavored to present such in his recent Historical Account of the Neutrality of Great Britain during the American Civil War, a work to which the North American now devotes a careful and able paper. The reviewer concedes to the book an upright intention, and a prevailing spirit of candor and impartiality, and he adds, that it is a model for those on this side of the water who cultivate the science of international law. The article in which this opinion is embodied is valuable for the condensed and brief, but perfectly clear, outline of the arguments used by both sides which it gives, and for the analytical justice with which they are treated. The aim of its writer, Prof. WOOLSEY, like that of his Oxford contemporary, is to convey real information, and to dispel international mistakes and prejudices which have already done their full share of mischief. "Contributions to the Theory of Natural Selection," by ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, is a series of essays by a writer well known as laboring in the same scientific field as Mr. DARWIN. Mr. CHAUNCEY WRIGHT'S present review of them expresses cordial admiration of many things in the book, and says that after all the doctrines of special providences, and the metaphysical isolation of human nature, are based upon barbaric conceptions of dignity, which are restricted in their application by every step forward in the progress of science. And the sense of security they give us of the most sacred things is more than replaced by the ever-growing sense of the universality of inviolable laws. An interesting map by FREDERICK H. HEDGE, discusses the "Method of History," and its development at various stages of human progress. "Congressional Reform" is a thoughtful paper by GAMALIEL BRADFORD, upon the fundamental defects of organization, by which the work of Congress is impeded and its value restricted. Various reforms are suggested, and among them that the members of the Cabinet should occupy seats in the two Houses. The general purport of the article is to recommend a more complete unity of action between the Departments and the Legislature, by which the efficiency of both would be promoted. "English Aristocracy and English Labor," by EDWARD BROOKS, treats of what, in the opinion of many close observers, is the one question of gravest import to England. The actual condition of kings, says the writer, is the outgrowth of the Conquest. Serfdom simply changed into caste and the serfs into paupers, but if the landlords are wise they will recognize "that property has its duties as well as its rights," &c. PIERRE BAYLE, the French philosophical writer, and his tomes, form the subject of an interesting sketch, by F. SHELDON. "France Under the Second Empire," is the title of a paper by H. W. HOMANS, containing much that is suggestive, and which he concludes by remarking that "the half-way house of limited monarchy would be our prediction of France's next stable phase, if we we were rash enough to make a prediction, which we are not." There are other contributions, critical notices, &c., which complete what may be considered a varied and ably written series of articles in this number of the North American.

The second number of the New Era, the new Jewish Monthly is an advance in point of variety and interest upon its predecessor. The editor, Rev. RAPHAEL D. C. LEWIN, contributes the first installment of what promises to be an interesting series of papers on the question, "What is a Jew?" Like other productions from the same pen, it is vigorous, pointed, and eloquent. Another leading feature of the number is the first part of a story under the title of "Babette." The writer, who appears under what is evidently a nom de plume—Phillip Bart—is a new hand in our periodical literature. He displays, in his opening chapter, a wonderful command of dramatic and sparkling dialogue, and opens what promises to be a somewhat original and sparkling work of fiction. An essay upon "Oliver Goldsmith" is very pleasantly written, and the other contents of the number are of fully average merit.

The Formation of the Ollivier Ministry—Extracts from the Imperial Correspondence.

The ninth installment of the Imperial correspondence discloses the steps taken for the formation of the Ollivier Ministry. On the 3d of October, 1869, OLLIVIER writes: "If the Emperor thinks he can make use of me, let him get all the advantage possible out of me; let him insert a notification in the Moniteur, charging me with the formation of a Ministry. This will startle people, and be of use.' On Oct. 30, M. PIERRI writes to M. DUVERNOIS that His Majesty has consented to receive M. OLLIVIER; and, in order to ensure secrecy and avoid any comments of the Press, the latter is directed to leave Paris by a train which starts in the evening after dark, and to return the next morning before daybreak. He is advised to cover his face with a scarf. M. DUVERNOIS' reply, marked private and immediate, is as follows: 'OLLIVIER will leave this evening at 8 o'clock. He will cover his head with a scarf and will not wear his spectacles. This will prevent his being recognized." The Emperor seems at first to have desired that OLLIVIER should join the Ministry then in power, instead of forming a new one. This plan the Deputy combats forcibly in a letter to M. DUVERNOIS of the 7th of November, and announces his intention of withdrawing from the negotiations. Next follows a long series of letters giving every step of the negotiation up to the formation of the Ministry. We extract the most curious passages. On the 10th of November, 1870, the future Prime Minister writes to DUVERNOIS: "Announce me in the Peuple in such a way as to efface the impression of your last articles. If you come to the Interior" (it was proposed to make him Under Secretary of State,) "you must mean liberty, not reaction." The next day he has decided to cast in his lot with the Imperial régime. "The Emperor's letter is so confiding and noble that it triumphs over all my scruples. I have made up my mind, and am ready to march to the combat." This does not, however, prevent his offering good advice to his sovereign, for on the 12th he writes: "Call young men to your aid, Sire; they alone can save your son; the egotistical old men who surround you think only of themselves. * * * This change in our officials is absolutely necessary; otherwise, you will perish of inanition in the midst of the incapable and dualianimous cohort of your functionaries.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI

Some Passages in the Reformancers' Redressal Worke, the Purport of His Earlier Protestantisme That of "Lothair" Unmentioned.

The following preface will appear in the collected edition of Mr. DISRAELI'S works:

AN AMERICAN SUGGESTION.

An American gentleman, with more than courtesy, has forwarded to me a vast number of notices of Lothair which have appeared in the leading journals of his country. He tells me that, irrespective of literary "organs," there are in the Union 5,000 newspapers, and it is not impossible that some notice of Lothair might appear in each of these. However various may be the opinions of those which I thus possess, they appear to me generally to be sincere, and in point of literary ability, taste, style and critical acumen, I think they need not fear competition with the similar productions of our own land. My English publishers also have made a collection of the notices of this work in our own country, and though we have not yet five thousand newspapers, the aggregate of articles is in amount, perhaps unprecedented. I have nothing to compiain of in their remarks. One could hardly expect at home the judicial impartiality of a foreign land. Personal influences inevitably mingle in some degree with such productions. There are critics who, abstractedly, do not approve of successful books, particularly if they have failed in the same style; social acquaintances also of lettered taste, and especially contemporaries whose public life has not exactly realized the vain dreams of their fussy existence, would seize the accustomed opportunity of welcoming with affected discrimination about nothing, and elaborate controversy about trifles, the production of a friend, and there is always, both in politics and literature, the race of the Dennises, the Oldmixons and Curls, who flatter themselves that by systematically libeling some eminent personage of their times, they have a chance of descending to posterity; but, so far as I am concerned, they have always been disappointed. A distinguished individual has suggested that, in a preface to this edition of my collected works, I might give my own views of the purport of Lothair. It strikes me, with all deference, that it would not be a little presumptuous for an author thus to be the self-critic of volumes which appeared only a few months ago. Their purport to the writer seems clear enough, and as they have been more extensively read both by the people of the United Kingdom and the United States than any work which has appeared for the last half century, I will even venture to assume that on this point they are all of the same opinion as myself. But, on some other works, the youngest of which were written a quarter of a century ago, it would, perhaps, be in me not impertinent now to make a few remarks. Coningsby, Sybil, and Tancred form a real trilogy; that is to say, they treat of the same subject, and endeavor to complete that treatment. The origin and character of our political parties, their influence on the condition of the people of this country, some picture of the moral and physical condition of that people, and some intimation of the means by which it might be elevated and improved, were themes which had long engaged my meditation.

THOUGHTS OF BOYHOOD.

Born in a library, and trained from early childhood by learned men who did not share the passions and the prejudices of our political and social life, I had imbibed on some subjects conclusions different from those which generally prevail, and especially with reference to the history of our own country. How an oligarchy had been substituted for a kingdom, and a narrow-minded and bigoted fanaticism flourished in the name of religious liberty, were problems long to me insoluble, but which early interested me. But what most attracted my musing, even as a boy, were the elements of our political parties, and the strange mystification by which that which was national in the Constitution had become odious, and that which was exclusive was presented as popular. What has mainly led to this confusion of public thought and this uneasiness of society, is our habitual carelessness in not distinguishing between the excellence of a principle and its injurious or obsolete application. The feudal system may have worn out, but its main principle, that the tenure of property should be the fulfillment of duty, is the essence of good government. The divine right of Kings may have been a plea for feeble tyrants, but the divine right of government is the key-stone of human progress, and without it governments sink into police, and a nation is degraded into a mob. National institutions were the ramparts of the multitude against large estates exercising political power derived from a limited class. The Church was in theory, and once it had been in practice, the spiritual and intellectual trainer of the people. The privileges of the multitude and the prerogatives of the Sovereign had grown up together, and together they had waned. Under the plea of Liberalism, all the institutions which were the bulwarks of the multitude had been sapped and weakened, and nothing had been substituted for them. The people were without education, and, relatively to the advance of science and the comfort of the superior classes, their condition had deteriorated, and their physical quality as a race was threatened. Those who in theory were the national party, and who sheltered themselves under the inscriptions of the country against the oligarchy had both by a misconception and a neglect of their duties, become, and justly become, odious; while the oligarchy, who had mainly founded themselves on the plunder of the popular estate, either in the shape of the possessions of the Church or the domains of the Crown, had by the patronage of certain principles which they only meagrely applied, assumed, and to a certain degree acquired, the character of a popular party. But no party was national; one was exclusive and odious, and the other liberal and cosmopolitan. The perverse deviations of political parties from their original significance may at first sight seem only subjects of historical curiosity, but they assume a different character when they practically result in the degradation of a people.

THE TASK OF THE TORY PARTY.

To change back the oligarchy into a generous aristocracy round a real throne; to infuse life and vigor into the Church as the trainer of the nation, by the revival of the Convocation, then dumb, on a wide basis, and not, as has been since done, in the shape of a priestly section; to establish a commercial code on the principles successfully negotiated by Lord BOLINGBROKE at Utrecht, and which, though baffled at the time by a Whig Parliament, were subsequently and triumphantly vindicated by his political pupil and heir, Mr. PITT; to govern Ireland according to the policy of CHARLES I., and not of OLIVER CROMWELL; to emancipate the political constituency of 1832 from its sectarian bondage and contracted sympathies; to elevate the physical as well as the moral condition of the people, by establishing that labor required a position as much as property; and all this rather by the use of ancient forms and the restoration of the past than by political revolutions founded on abstract ideas, appeared to be the course which the circumstances of this country required, and which, practically speaking, could only, with all their faults and backslidings, be undertaken and accomplished by a reconstructed Tory Party. When I attempted to enter public life I expressed these views, long meditated, to my countrymen, but they met with little encouragement. He who steps out of the crowd is listened to with suspicion or with heedlessness; and forty years ago there prevailed a singular ignorance of the political history of the country. I had no connection either in the Press or in public life. I incurred the accustomed penalty of being looked on as a visionary, and what I knew to be facts were treated as paradoxes.

"TEN YEARS AFTERWARD."

Ten years afterward affairs had changed. I had been some time in Parliament, and had friends who had entered public life with myself, and who listened always with interest, and sometimes with sympathy, to views which I had never ceased to enforce. Living much together, without combination, we acted together. Some of those who were then my companions have, like myself, since taken some part in the conduct of public affairs; two of them, and those who were not the least interested in our speculations, have departed. One was GEORGE SMYTHE, afterward seventh Lord STRANGFORD, a man of brilliant gifts, of dazzling wit, infinite culture, and fascinating manners. His influence over youth was remarkable, and he could promulgate a new faith with graceful enthusiasm. HENRY HOPE, the eldest son of the author of Anastasius was of a different nature, but he was learned and accomplished, possessed a penetrating judgment and an inflexible will. Master of a vast fortune, his house naturally became our frequent rendezvous; and it was at the Deepdene that he first urged the expediency of my treating in a literary form those views and subjects which were the matter of our frequent conversation. This was the origin of Coningsby, or the New Generation, which I commenced under his roof, and which I inscribed to his name. The derivation and character of political parties, the condition of the people which had been the consequence of them, the duties of the Church as a main remedial agency in our present state, were the three principal topics which I intended to treat; but I found they were too vast for the space I had allotted to myself. These were launched in Coningsby, but the origin and condition of political parties, the first portion of the theme, was the only one completely handled in that work.

THE CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

Next year, (1845,) in Sybil, or the Two Nations, I considered the condition of the people, and the whole work, generally speaking, was devoted to that portion of my scheme. At that time the Chartist agitation was still fresh in the public memory, and its repetition was far from improbable. I had mentioned to my friend, the late THOMAS DUNCOMBE, and who was my friend before I entered the House of Commons, something of what I was contemplating; and he offered and obtained for my perusal the whole of the correspondence of FEARGUS O'CONNOR, when conductor of the Northern Star, with the leaders and chief actors of the Chartist movement. I had visited and observed with care all the localities introduced: and as an accurate and never exaggerated picture of a remarkable period in our domestic history, and of a popular organization, which, in its extent and completeness, has perhaps never been equaled, the pages of Sybil may, I venture to believe, be consulted with confidence. In recognising the Church as a powerful agent in the previous development of England, and possibly the most efficient means of that renovation of the national spirit which was desired, it seemed to me that the time had arrived when it became my duty to second to the utmost of that great ecclesiastical corporation, and consider the position of the descendants of that race who had been the founders of Christianity, some of the great truths of ethnology were necessarily involved in such discussions. Familiar as we all are now with such themes, the House of Israel being now freed from the barbarism of mediæval misconception, and judged, like all other races, by their contributions to the existing sum of human welfare, and the general influence of the race on human action being universally recognized as the key of history, the difficulty and hazard of touching for the first time on such topics cannot now be easily appreciated. But public opinion recognized both the truth and sincerity of these views, and, with its sanction, in Tancred, or the New Crusade, the third portion of the trilogy, I completed their development. It will be seen that the general spirit of these productions ran counter to the views which had been long prevalent in England, and which may be popularly, though not altogether accurately, described as utilitarian. They recognized imagination in the government of nations as a quality not less important than reason. They trusted much to a popular sentiment, which rested on an heroic tradition, and was sustained by the high spirit of a free aristocracy. Their economic principles were not unsound, but they looked upon the health and knowledge of the multitude as not the least precious part of the wealth of nations. In asserting the doctrine of race, they were entirely opposed to the equality of man, and similar abstract dogmas, which have destroyed ancient society without creating a satisfactory substitute. Resting on popular sympathies and popular privileges, they held that no society was durable unless it was built upon the principles of loyalty and religious reverence.

THE ANGLICAN CHURCH.

The writer and those who acted with him looked, then, upon the Anglican Church as a main machinery by which these results might be realized. There were few great things left in England, and the Church was one. Nor do I now doubt that if a quarter of a century ago there had arisen a churchman equal to the occasion, the position of ecclesiastical affairs in this country would have been very different from that which they now occupy. But these great matters fell into the hands of monks and schoolmen; and little more than a year after the publication of Coningsby, the secession of Dr. NEWMAN dealt a blow to the Church of England under which it still reels. That extraordinary event has been "apologized" for, but has never been explained. It was a mistake and a misfortune. The tradition of the Anglican Church was powerful. Resting on the Church of Jerusalem, modified by the Divine school of Galilee, it would have found that rock of truth which Providence, by the instrumentality of the Semitic race, had promised to St. Peter. Instead of that, the seceders sought refuge in mediæval superstitions, which are generally only the embodiment of pagan ceremonies and creeds.

GLOOMY PROSPECTS.

It cannot be denied that the aspect of the world and this country, to those who have faith in the spiritual nature of man, is at this time dark and distressful. They listen to doubts, and denials of an active Providence; what is styled materialism is in the ascendant. To those who believe that an atheistical society, though it may be polished and amiable, involves the seeds of anarchy, the prospect is full of gloom. This disturbance in the mind of nations has been occasioned by two causes—firstly, by the powerful assault on the divinity of the Semitic literature by the Germans; and, secondly, by recent discoveries of science, which are hastily supposed to be inconsistent with our long-received convictions as to the relations between the Creator and the created. One of the consequences of the divine government of this world, which has ordained that the sacred purposes should be effected by the instrumentality of various human races, must be occasionally a jealous discontent with the revelation intrusted to a particular family. But there is no reason to believe that the Teutonic rebellion of the present century against the Divine truths intrusted to the Semites will ultimately meet with more success than the Celtic insurrection of the preceding age. Both have been sustained by the highest intellectual gifts that human nature has ever displayed; but, when the tumult subsides, the Divine truths are found to be not less prevalent than before, and simply because they are Divine. Man brings to the study of the oracles more learning and more criticism than of yore; and it is well that it should be so. The documents will yet bear a greater amount both of erudition and examination than they have received; but the word of God is eternal, and will survive the spheres. The skeptical effects of the discoveries of science and the uneasy feeling that they cannot co-exist with our old religious convictions have their origin in the circumstance that the general body who have suddenly become conscious of these physical truths are not so well acquainted as is desirable with the past history of man. Astonished by their unprepared emergence from ignorance to a certain degree of information, their amazed intelligence takes refuge in the theory of what is conveniently called progress, and every step in scientific discovery seems further to remove them from the path of primeval inspiration. But there is no fallacy so flagrant as to suppose that the modern ages have the peculiar privilege of scientific discovery, or that they are distinguished as the epochs of the most illustrious inventions. On the contrary, scientific invention has always gone on unconsciously with the revelation of spiritual truths; and more, the greatest discoveries are not those of modern ages. No one for a moment can pretend that printing is so great a discovery as writing, or algebra as language. What are the most brilliant of our chemical discoveries compared with the invention of the sun and the metals? Is a vulgar belief that our astronomical knowledge dates only from the recent century, when it was rescued from the monks who imprisoned GALILEO; but HIPPARCHUS, who lived before the Divine Teacher of Galilee, and who made other sublime achievements discovered the procession of the equinoxes, ranks with the Newtons and the Keplers; and COPERNICUS, the modern father of our celestial science, avows himself, in his famous work, as only the champion of PYTHAGORAS, whose system he enforces and illustrates. Even the most modish schemes of the day on the origin of things, which captivate as much by their novelty as their truth, may find their precursors in ancient sages, and after a careful analysis of the blended elements of imagination and induction which characterize the new theories, they will be found mainly to rest on the atom of EPICURUS and the monad of THALES. Scientific like spiritual truth has ever from the beginning been descending from Heaven to man. He is a being who organically demands direct relations with his Creator, and he would not have been so organized if his requirements could not be satisfied. We may analyze the sun and penetrate the stars, but man is conscious that he is made in God's own image, and in his perplexity he will ever appeal to our Father which art in Heaven.

NON-POLITICAL WORKS.

I had been in Parliament seven years when this Trilogy was published, and during that period I had not written anything, but in 1837, the year I entered the House of Commons, I had published two works, Henrietta Temple and Venetia. These are not political works, but they record more deeply the feelings more enduring than public passions, and they were written with care and some delight. They were inscribed to two friends, the best I ever had and not the least gifted. One was the inimitable D'ORSAY, the most accomplished and most engaging character that has figured in this century, who, with the form and universal genius of an Alcibiades, combined a brilliant wit and a heart of quick affection, and who, placed in a public position, would have displayed a courage, a judgment and a commanding intelligence which would have ranked him with the leaders of mankind. The other was one who had enjoyed that public opportunity which had been denied to Comte D'ORSAY. The world has recognized the political courage, the versatile ability and the masculine eloquence of Lord LYNDHURST, but his intimates were only acquainted with the tenderness of his disposition, the sweetness of his temper, his ripe scholarship, and the playfulness of his bright and airy spirit.

AN INCIDENT.

And here I cannot refrain from mentioning that in 1837 I accompanied Lord LYNDHURST to Kensington Palace, when, on the accession of the Queen, the Peers and Privy Councilors, and chief personages of the realm, pledged their fealty to their new Sovereign. He was greatly affected by the unusual scene; a youthful maiden receiving the homage of her subjects, most of them illustrious, in a palace in a garden, and all with a sweet and natural dignity. He gave me, as we drove home, an animated picture of what had occurred in the Presence Chamber, marked by all that penetrating observation and happy terseness of description which distinguished him. Eight years afterward, with my memory still under the influence of his effective narrative, I produced the scene in Sybil, and I feel sure it may be referred to for its historical accuracy.

LATER EFFORTS.

There was yet a barren interval of five years of my life, so far as literature was concerned, between the publication of Henrietta Temple and Venetia, and my earlier works. In 1832 I had published Contarini Fleming and Alroy. I then returned from two years of travel in the Mediterranean regions, and I published Contarini Fleming anonymously, and in the midst of a revolution. It was almost stillborn, and, having written with deep thought and feeling, I was naturally discouraged from further effort. Yet the youthful writer who may like me, be inclined to despair, may learn also from my example not to be precipitate in his resolves. Gradually Contarini Fleming found sympathizing readers; GOETHE and BECKFORD were compelled to communicate their unsolicited opinions of this work to its anonymous author, and I have seen a criticism on it by HEINE, of which any writer may be justly proud. Yet all these do not prevent me from being conscious that it would have been better if a subject so essentially psychological had been treated at a more mature period of life.

YOUTHFUL FOLLIES.

I had commenced Alroy the year after my first publication, and had thrown the manuscript aside. Being at Jerusalem in the year 1831, and visiting the traditionary tombs of the kings, my thoughts recurred to the marvelous career which had attracted my boyhood, and I shortly after finished a work which I began the year after I wrote Vivian Grey. What my opinion was of that my first work, written in 1826, was shown by my publishing my second anonymously. Books written by boys which pretend to give a picture of manners and to deal in knowledge of human nature must be affected. There can be, at the best, but the result of imagination acting on knowledge not acquired by experience. Of such circumstances exaggeration is a necessary consequence, and false taste accompanies exaggeration. Nor is it necessary to remark that a total want of art must be observed in such pages, for that is a failing incident to all first efforts. Vivian Grey is essentially a puerile work, but it has baffled even the efforts of its creator to suppress it. Its fate has been strange, and not the least remarkable thing is, that forty-four years after its first publication I must ask the indulgence of its reader for its continued and inevitable reappearance.

THE NATHAN MURDER.

A German Accuses Himself of the Crime, and Surrenders Himself to Inspector Dilks.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the office of Superintendent KELSO was crowded with Tammany men of high renown, a man of gentlemanly and sedate appearance was found wandering about the building, earnestly demanding to see the Chief. Access to the presence of that functionary was, however, denied by the sturdy policeman at the door. The stranger then asked for Inspector DILKS, and being conducted into the presence of that official, glanced nervously at the several officers sitting in the room, and then requested a private interview. Inspector DILKS took him into his private office, from whence he emerged in a few minutes, and, with an expression of amused incredulity upon his face, called Superintendent KELSO, who also entered the private office. Very soon both officials emerged, and Officer TILLY, of the Detective Squad, being called, was directed to take charge of the stranger, who was delivered into his custody and locked up in one of the strong rooms.

Then Inspector DILKS announced to the gentlemen in his main office, that they had just seen the Nathan murderer, and told the story the stranger had told to him. Having declared that he was a German, who had arrived in this country on the 1st of July, the stranger said calmly and positively, as if mentioning an ordinary matter, that it was he who had murdered BENJAMIN NATHAN. Then he became a little excited, and, rambling on in a disjointed manner, gave a somewhat incoherent account of the murder, which, it was plain to see, he had obtained from too much reading of sensational reports, and ended by declaring that his remorse for the crime had become intolerable, and he finally determined to surrender himself, and receive the punishment due to his horrible deed. He further said that he did not intend to kill Mr. NATHAN, but that gentleman having grappled him as he was rifling the safe, he was forced to butcher him in self-defense.

Both Superintendent KELSO and Inspector DILKS were convinced that the self-accuser was a lunatic, and therefore did not at the moment, as other matters were pressing for attention, examine him at length. The stranger, whose name is said to be WAGER, is about thirty-five years of age, of medium height, slightly built, and has a narrow face, with chin whiskers and mustache, a prominent nose and dark complexion. He was faultlessly dressed in the latest style, and, with his fashionable eye-glasses set jauntily upon his nose, looked nothing like the Nathan murderer, as he has been supposed to be. The stranger is yet detained at Police Head-quarters, and there may be further interesting developments concerning him.

Suicide at Cutchogue, L. I.

HORACE HORTON, a farmer of Cutchogue, L. I., aged between twenty-five and twenty-seven years, committed suicide yesterday morning. He left the house, as usual, at an early hour, to drive the cows to pasture, but not returning after a considerable time, his wife started to look for him. In going out to the barn, to make sure that he had not come back unnoticed, she was horrified to find his body suspended from a beam therein. He had taken his own life by hanging. No cause has been assigned for the act, save that when young he was troubled with occasional spells of aberration of mind, which, however, had not been noticed for several years, but of late he had grown moody, and his conduct at times, has been somewhat strange. The deceased was a prominent member of the M. E. Church, a man of good habits, unblemished character and spotless reputation, and was greatly respected and beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a widow and one child. Coroner SKINNER, of Orient, was notified to hold an inquest.

LAW REPORTS.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 211.—The National Bank of the Republic vs. Rees P. Millard.—Error to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.—The defendant in error sued the bank on a check drawn by a Pay-master in the army on the bank in his favor against funds to the credit of the drawer. Millard had been an officer in the army, and his account had been settled through his attorneys, Rutger, Teal & Co. The check was delivered by the paymaster to those attorneys, one of whom indorsed it in Millard's name and in the name of the attorneys, and received the money on it from the bank, and, as alleged, appropriated it to his own use. On the trial the defendant denied that he had given any one authority to indorse. It appeared that a power of attorney had been given to one Brockway to settle certain accounts with power of substitution, and that he had substituted the firm named in his place.

The Court charged that so far as the authority to indorse the check depended on the power of attorney, it devolved on the bank to show that such authority was given by the power of attorney, and that the provisions of instructions must be strictly construed when produced, and when not produced, as was the case, the jury should not, without proof, on their own inference decide that it contained a particular provision to grant a power that a power of attorney existed. The Court refused to charge that Millard could not recover if, by reposing authority in Brockway or others, he had facilitated the act by which Teal, one of the firm, had unlawfully obtained the money for the Court refused to charge that Millard could not recover unless the defendant (the bank) had accepted or promised to pay him or his assignee the particular check in controversy. The verdict was for Millard on these instructions and refusals to instruct, and the case came up for revision, and was argued.

Bradley & Cox for plaintiff in error; E. L. Stanton for defendant.

TUESDAY, NOV. 8—P. M.

Election Day has had its full measure of influence on the Wall-street and general markets. Operations have been on a reduced scale in most lines, and little spirit has been apparent, even in speculative circles.

Money has been in very full supply on call within the steady range of 4@6 ₱ cent., as the extremes. The rate to the prominent Government houses has been generally 4, and to the leading Stock Exchange firms 5 ₱ cent., at which figures the wants of the chief borrowers have been promptly met. A light business has been reported in the discount line. The offerings of the better grades of commercial paper have been comparatively limited, and readily placed at from 7@8¼ ₱ cent. per annum. The City Bank exchanges have been $36,304,556, and the resulting balances $2,751,536. The currency disbursements of the Treasury Office were $293,570, and the balance, this evening, was $8,368,668.

UNITED STATES TREASURY, NEW-YORK, NOV. 8.
Gold receipts	$826,402 17
Gold payments	769,193 19
Gold balance	60,390,215 67
Currency receipts	293,599 62
Currency payments	270,514 53
Currency balance	8,368,667 70
Customs	321,000 00

In the Gold speculation there has been less activity, with the dealings ranging from 110¼@110¾, and leaving off at 110¾, as on yesterday. Through the late afternoon, the transactions were mainly on the basis of 110¼@110¾. The day's advices from Europe were not of a decisive tenor, for or against the movement. The firmness in American Securities in the London market favored steadiness in the local operations. The borrowing call for Gold was fair, and rates ranged from flat to 3 ₱ cent. per annum for the use of coin. The Government office received $321,000 from Customs. The coin disbursements were $769,193, chiefly on the November interest account. The coin balance at the close of business was $60,390,216. The Gold Exchange Bank clearances were $53,467,000. At least a million of Treasury Gold will be marketed to-morrow under the November programme of the Department. There has been a limited business reported in the Foreign Exchange line on the basis of 109 for best sixty-day sterling bills, the offerings of which have been quite moderate. The produce export of the week has been up to the unusually liberal currency value of $5,181,358. The Cotton arrivals at the shipping ports keep up to high figures, showing 68,660 bales for the first three days of the current week, against 61,050 bales the corresponding days of last week, an increase, thus far, of 7,610 bales.

The Public Funds have been rather firmer in values on less urgent offerings. The demand, however, has been light, and the general movement devoid of spirit. The Board dealings were unimportant in amount.

At the Stock Exchange and in the Long Room, the Railway speculation was buoyant on the present favorites, though the dealings were moderate on the general list. The exceptions of activity were in the instances of Lake Shore, which sold up to 94¾, and closed at 94¾, a fraction higher than yesterday; North-west Preferred, which touched 90½; New-York Central, which advanced to 92¾; and St. Paul, Wabash, and Ohio and Mississippi, which showed an improvement. Rock Island and Reading ruled firm. Western Union Telegraph was the main feature of the Miscellaneous list, opening at 41¾@41¾, and selling up to 41¾. The closing price was 41¾. The extremes on Pacific Mail were 41¾@41¾, and the final rate 41¾. The general market exhibited decided strength on the later sales.

The following quotations were made as compared with Monday night:

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

V. K. STEVENSON. V. K. STEVENSON, JR.

OFFICE OF V. K. STEVENSON & SON, NO. 11 PINE-STREET, NEW-YORK, Nov. 4, 1870.

☞ The attention of parties desiring a strictly first-class investment in one of the VERY BEST roads in the South, is invited to the advertisement in another column of the SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD EIGHT PER CENT. INDORSED GOLD BONDS.

Length of road, 183 miles; 102 miles completed and fully equipped; iron and ties for 15 miles additional now on the ground, which will complete 117 miles, leaving but 66 miles to complete, and upon which a large amount of work has been done.

V. K. STEVENSON & SON.

☞ TWENTY YEAR GOLD BONDS OF THE PORT ROYAL RAILROAD COMPANY.

These bonds are secured by deed of trust to the Union Trust Company of New-York, covering the entire property and franchise of the Company. They bear seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in New-York, free of Government tax, and are convertible into the capital stock of the Company, at the option of the holder.

The road traverses the best district of South Carolina; unites the harbor of Port Royal—the finest harbor south of New-York—with Augusta, Ga., and there connects with all the roads which centre at that point.

It forms, with the Savannah and Charleston Road, a line as short as any other from Augusta to Savannah or Charleston, and is the Atlantic or seaboard link in THROUGH lines of road extending west beyond the Mississippi. These facts assure it a business second to that of no railroad in the South, and render its Mortgage Bonds secure beyond any question.

The road will be entirely finished, ready for business, by May 1, 1871.

We confidently recommend these bonds to our friends and customers, as a perfectly sound and profitable investment.

Pamphlets and maps, giving fuller statement, sent on application.

We also have a variety of Registered Bonds, issued by towns and counties in Illinois, the interest upon which is collected and paid by the State, for sale on favorable terms.

HENRY H. BOODY & CO., No. 12 Wall-street.

FRUIT—There has been a fair trade in Layer Raisins, on the basis of $2 85 ₱ box; sales since our last, 3,500 boxes. Muscatel Raisins have been in demand at $3 25 ₱ box, and Seedless Raisins at 6c. @6¼c., gold, here, and 5¾c. @6¼c., gold, to arrive. New Crop Currants have been saleable and steady at 12¼c. ₱ lb. Other articles have been very moderately sought after at unchanged figures.

GRAIN—The Wheat market ruled quite dull, up to near the close of Change, holders refusing to yield, while buyers were claiming concessions. Toward the close, the offerings were more liberal, and about a cent a bushel off previous quotations, which led to a moderate movement, chiefly in New Spring and Amber Winter, for export. The dealings in new crop Spring were mainly within the range of $1 26@$1 27, chiefly at $1 25@$1 26 for No. 2, and $1 27@$1 28, mostly $1 27, for fair No. 1 ₱ bushel. A load of choice new No. 1 Milwaukee Spring was bought at the close, on speculative account, at $1 28 ₱ bushel. Parts of loads of extra do. were purchased for shipment at $1 29@$1 30 ₱ bushel, an exceptional quotation. There was some inquiry for new and old No. 2 Spring Mixed at $1 18@$1 20, and for old crops do. at $1 12@$1 18 ₱ bushel. In Red and Amber Western (Winter) the transactions were on a very limited scale, ranging from $1 27@$1 28, as extreme, chiefly at $1 21¾@$1 28, for fair ordinary to good, $1 31¼ for prime, in store, and $1 38 for very good Amber, afloat. The export purchases included a few lots of Amber Western at $1 35¼ in store, and $1 38 afloat. White Wheat has been slow of sale at irregular prices. A load of ordinary White Indiana was placed at $1 40 ₱ bushel; and job lots of better quality at higher figures. The general market wound up tamely, sales have been reported since our last of 127,000 bushels, including White Western at $1 40@$1 65, chiefly at $1 40@$1 50; Red and Western last at $1 27@$1 38, chiefly at $1 31¼@$1 38; No. 1 Spring at $1 26@$1 30, and very handsome do. at $1 29@$1 30; No. 2 do., $1 24@$1 27, chiefly at $1 25@$1 28 for new, $1 18@$1 17 for old crop, and $1 17@$1 21 for new and old mixed; White Genesee, $1 35@$1 70; Red and Amber State, $1 30@$1 38; new Red and Amber Southern at $1 30@$1 38; White Southern nominally at $1 50@ $1 70 ₱ bushel. Corn has been in moderate request, and with very meagre offerings prices have been quoted firmer. The business has been mainly in old Mixed Western at 90c. @91c., afloat, closing less buoyantly, with 90c. bid and 91c. asked for very good grades. Yellow has been slow of sale and unsettled. There has been a fair call for White for milling purposes at quoted rates. Sales have been reported since our last of 57,000 bushels at 88c. @91¾c. for ordinary to prime old Mixed Western, in store and afloat, closing at about 90c. @91c. as the nominal figures for very good loads, afloat; 88c. @ 89c. for new Mixed Western; 84c. @85c. for Yellow Jersey, Western and State; 83c. @90c. for White do., mostly at 88c. @90c. for White Western, and 80c. @85c. for Unsound and Inferior ₱ bushel. Rye has been very quiet at unaltered rates. We quote the range from 87½c. @ 97½c. for ordinary to prime new Western, and $1 06@ $1 15 for State, ₱ bushel. Barley has been quiet and heavy since our last

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

A Tours dispatch of the 8th says that on Monday night a Prussian column attacked the outposts of the Army of the Loire at Poisley and Laurent des Bois. The French being reinforced, drove them beyond Valliere, capturing sixty-four prisoners. A later dispatch says that a general engagement took place yesterday, near Orleans, the result of which is not given. Ambulances were sent to the front. According to a London dispatch, the town of Verdun had capitulated, but no details had been received. The bombardment of Neu-Briesach had resulted in dismounting the French batteries and the cessation of the French fire on Alt-Briesach across the Rhine.

Count BISMARCK has published an explanation of the rupture of the negotiations for an armistice, in which he says that after the French Government had declared its inability to accept the German offer of an armistice based on the existing situation, he proposed to M. THIERS that they name a time for holding the elections for a Constituent Assembly, promising absolute freedom of election even in territory occupied by the Prussians. M. THIERS, after consulting JULES FAVRE and Gen. TROCHU, returned to Versailles without power to accept the offer. Private telegrams received at London from Versailles, support this explanation, and say further that M. FAVRE and a majority of his colleagues favored the election of a Constituent Assembly, but Gen. TROCHU opposed it and carried his point. King WILLIAM has issued an order prohibiting all intercourse with the City of Paris. The Berlin journals throw the responsibility for the impending destruction of Paris on the French. The Vienna Correspondenz says the French Government acts as if unconscious of its defeat. M. THIERS is expected in Tours today.

M. ESQUIROS reports that the people of Marseilles have submitted to the Government. He therefore tenders his resignation, asserting that it is the duty to unite against the invader. The Germans supply the French prisoners with clothes. The Prussian Government has countermanded the order for the restoration of the lights and buoys at the mouth of the Elbe. A London dispatch states that Baron HAUSSMANN has been arrested.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Special Committee of the Italian Senate on the question of changing the capital to Rome, recommend that it, the change, be not made until after the death of the present Pope. M. THIERS, in a letter to the Pope, assures him that the Great Powers will consider his case at the coming Congress, and a position "worthy of God's vicegerent will be provided for him." The King will enter Rome after the elections, which are to be held NOV. 30....Mr. KRAMER, the new American Minister to Denmark, presented his credentials yesterday.

MEXICO.

A "terrible revolution" is said to have recently broken out in the Mexican State of Guerrero. The troops of the Government had been defeated, and reinforcements were moving forward from the capital. JUAREZ had been seriously ill. Mexican sentiment was changing in favor of the French Republic. The Mexican Government was resorting to suspicious means to defeat the claims of Americans against Mexico. A revolution in Tehuantepec against the State excited apprehensions for the success of the canal surveying expedition. A Cuban had been fatally wounded in a duel with a Peruvian, at Colima. A volcano near Valscautillo, between Durango and Chihuahua, was in a state of eruption.

GENERAL.

A fire in Lafayette, Ind., destroyed the large grocery establishment of C. W. PIERCE & Co., causing damage to the amount of $100,000. The insurance amounts to about $150,000, mainly in Eastern companies.

On Saturday last an eastward bound train on the Pacific Railroad was stopped by five men at Pequoss, and the engine and express car detached and run a few miles ahead. The express car was then broken open and the messenger gagged, and $3,100 taken. A special train with Police and horses was sent to the scene of the robbery a few hours afterward. A glove was found with the name "CARR" on it. This is believed to belong to a soldier who recently killed a woman at Fort Halleck and who escaped from the guard-house. The five robbers are believed to be deserters from Fort Halleck.

Our Worthy Masters—As Before.

If the people in the interior of the State had done their duty as well as the people in the City, we should have a more satisfactory statement to place before the public today. The Democratic majorities here were largely reduced. A good many Republicans voted who generally absent themselves from the polls. But the Tammany leaders appear to have executed a rather sharp move in sending a portion of their repeaters to operate in the rural districts, and thus break down our strength in the quarters where we generally depend most upon it. The Republican managers could not, or did not, provide against this little scheme—the device, probably, of the gigantic brain of Mr. SWEENY, or the fertile invention of our accomplished and handsome Mayor.

We must take these things as they happen. Most people who have interested themselves in practical politics know that the cause which ought to win very rarely does win at first. We must have a settled organization against the Ring, and work at it steadily until we gain the victory. They say that Rome was not built in a day. We have made a beginning. The usual fraudulent vote for Tammany has undoubtedly been reduced, but as a fair election is simply impossible under our present system, it is needless to say that we were not favored with the luxury yesterday. The efforts of the United States officials, to be quite candid, did not accomplish very much. In the first place, the Police were the obedient agents of Tammany throughout the day, and as there was no force to oppose to their's except in a case of extreme emergency, they practically managed everything as they liked. Then, an immense sum of money was spent by TWEED and his agents—in fact, the Herald boasted the other day that Tammany would "from her savings put a million into this election. She can buy up every man that is in the market, and as far as necessary she has bought or will buy them." So much for the tactics openly avowed by our beloved rulers. They wasted no time in talking about principles, but went straight to the pocket.

Then, the precious compact entered into on the part of the United States and the Tammany leaders, by which people were not to be prevented from recording votes known or suspected to be fraudulent, was a virtual abandonment of the field to Tammany—or, as the World expresses it, "a falling back on the entire line" of the Federal power. It came to this: the Tammany leaders said to the United States authorities, "If you will let us do what we like with the ballot-boxes, we will not break your heads. If you object, there will certainly be a 'muss.'" The Republican managers then said, "Well, for the sake of peace, have it all your own way." So there was no "muss." The World came out and comforted the Democratic repeaters withal by assuring them that they could go to work with perfect impunity, that the Police had orders not to interfere with them, and that the United States forces might as well be in Alaska as here. The repeaters were not to be arrested, under any circumstances, until after they had voted, according to the well-known plan of taking care of a horse—namely, to shut the stable-door after he has kicked up his heels and run away. Thus it came to pass that the whole game was put in the hands of the Adonis who is so obliging as to act as our Mayor, and he and his less beautiful friends magnanimously promised to make no disturbance. It was not a new trick, although newly applied to politics. A man meets you in the street and says, "Give me your watch, pocket-book, and any valuables you may have about you, and I won't knock you down." You comply, and the whole affair is pleasantly ended.

With regard to the vote for Governor, it is scarcely worth while saying anything about it this morning, as the returns were carefully kept back until all the returns from the State were received—so that the requisite majority for HOFFMAN might be manufactured. The tactics of 1868 were repeated. We venture to say that Mr. TWEED and his friends did not go to bed last night, but spent their time in making the vote "symmetrical." This is what they understand by the "science of government."

The upshot of it all is that Mr. TWEED and his friends are in office, and are not likely to go out until, like Mrs. GAMP, they are "so disposed," or until the people make them, and the only consolation we have is that the prettiest man in the world is our Mayor, and that if the City goes to ruin, we shall at least always have an Apollo in the City Hall, with TWEED on his right hand, and FISK on his left.

The Elections in Other States.

From Massachusetts the returns are full and satisfactory. WENDELL PHILLIPS' eloquent invective has not lessened the Republican vote, nor developed any great strength for the Labor and Prohibition parties. In many districts his vote is below that polled by CHAMBERLAIN, an unknown and personally uninfluential man. One hundred and sixty-eight towns and cities give CLAFLIN, for Governor, 41,093, as against 35,411 in the last election; ADAMS, 31,986, as against 20,633; PHILLIPS, 11,895, as against CHAMBERLAIN'S 7,710. All the Republican Congressmen have been re-elected, and both branches of the Legislature are strongly Republican.

Rhode Island and civil service reform lose the services of Mr. JENCKES—the Congressional election in the Eastern District having resulted in the triumph of EAMES, (Sprague Republican,) by a majority over four other candidates, JENCKES included. In the Western District, PENDLETON has been elected by a light Republican vote.

New-Jersey has done nobly. There are large Republican gains in nearly all parts of the State, with a clear gain of two Congressmen—HALSEY in the Fifth District and NEWELL in the Second. The election of HALSEY is secured by a Republican majority of 3,000 in Newark—a change which gives to the State the services of a very able man. The Congressional representation is now Republican in four of the five districts into which the State is divided.

Chicago sends tidings of the election of FARWELL, Protectionist Republican, over JOHN WENTWORTH, candidate of the revenue reformers and Democrats; with a Republican county ticket and a Republican majority of city officers.

The information from Maryland is confined to Baltimore, where SWANN and ARCHER, Democrats, have been elected to Congress by reduced majorities. Delaware has celebrated the first appearance of the colored vote with rioting at Wilmington, Odessa and Smyrna,—with what political result we have yet to learn. Virginia exhibits a close contest in several localities and a light vote in others; and the latter characteristic seems also to apply to the Montgomery district in Alabama,—the only one which has supplied a return.

The Situation in France.

It is impossible to read the conflicting accounts which reach us respecting the late negotiations for an armistice, without feeling that there is something behind which we want a key in order that we may understand. Why should the Republican members of the Provisional Government be reported as agreeing to the proposed armistice, and Gen. TROCHU alone be found dissenting from it? And, admitting this to be satisfactorily explained, why should a minority of one have been able to counterbalance the opinion of the rest of the Council? Why again, should King WILLIAM have relented so suddenly in his declared intention of bombarding Paris, and have put off for a fortnight what was to have been commenced eight days ago? It is hard to see what better chance of peace there can be after this interval. Has the distant view of Paris from Versailles so wrought upon the sympathies of the Prussian King as to produce a clemency which his previous acquaintance with it failed to excite? It is at this moment the curse of France to be hopelessly isolated in sections, and divided into three or four political parties. The nation cannot in any intelligible way make its voice heard, and even had it the opportunity, it is questionable whether it is sufficiently resolved about the future to give a very clear or unhesitating response. Thus, though the Republic is in actual existence, it would be a mistake to accept the failure of the late negotiations as a necessary acquiescence in the will of the people. For the present, France is nearly as much ruled by personal government as it was under the Empire, only there are several leaders instead of one, and it is by no means certain that the plans of each are fully known to the others.

BAZAINE has been accused of sacrificing patriotism to selfish ambition. With the Republic he had nothing in common. He played his last card to give his partner at Wilhelmshoehe the chance of scoring a trick with the further inducement, probably, of a substantial consideration for his pains. Gen. TROCHU is, both as a man and soldier, of a very different stamp from the Marshal of Mexican fame. But it is exceedingly questionable whether he believes in his heart that the Republic is the best thing for France. It would be absurd to be apprehensive of such a man engaging in a discreditable intrigue; but it would involve no dishonor to credit him with the conviction that an Orleans restoration is the only event that would bring peace and repose to his distracted country. He may, like other friends of the family of LOUIS PHILIPPE, believe that the peasantry of France might be brought to prefer the rule of the Count of PARIS to that of a republic. The latter has as yet done nothing which has very obviously served to repair the disasters of the past. Gen. TROCHU'S late remarkable address bears on the face of it a strong conviction that its author had matured plans on which he confidently reckoned for ultimate success. In standing out from his colleagues on the question of the armistice, the Governor of Paris shows a disposition to make his policy emphatically his own and so to be personally identified with either its success or failure. That his ambition tends exclusively to his own aggrandizement, we cannot believe. That he aims at success against the enemies of his country, partly in order to be able to ensure the part of MONK to another CHARLES, is far from improbable. We can scarcely doubt that Prussia would give better terms to a monarchy in France than to the existing Republic. She cannot help considering the latter as a very dangerous neighbor to the impulsive Democracy of South Germany, and would, all protestations to the contrary notwithstanding, be perfectly willing to assist at its downfall. Meanwhile, it is obvious that Gen. TROCHU has the confidence of the armed populace of Paris, and while this may be the best thing that could happen for the capital, it has some appearance of danger for the Republic. The diplomatic movements that doubtless underlie the fourteen days postponement of the bombardment, will no doubt become apparent are many days are over, and may possibly reveal some new phase of the plans of those who at present control the destinies of France.

Italy Restored.

It is a remarkable circumstance connected with the gigantic events of the past Summer, that two such great historical changes as the unification of Italy, and the overthrow of the temporal power of the Pope, should occur and produce so little impression on the world. The unity of Italy has been the aspiration of her patriots and the dream of her poets for centuries. In the essentials of unity she was already one—a similar religious faith, a past of literary and artistic glory which all the States alike could claim, a language which was said to be composed of the choicest words of all the local dialects, a commercial and industrial interest which was harmonious, and a temperament which was sufficiently alike to be reconcilable. The hopes and ambitions of the different provinces and cities were to be united. The obstacles and the separations were maintained only in the interest of the various petty Governments and the power of the House of Austria. The past had taught the people of Italy—as it taught the people of Germany—that their misfortunes sprang from their divisions into small States and Governments. Each city, jealous of the other, and each petty province, maintaining its own small dynasty and expensive administration, at once burdened the citizens and exposed them as a prey to tyrants. Without unity and torn by internal dissensions, Italy for ages was the battle-ground of the Great Powers, who alternately built up their temporary empire and were driven from the Peninsula. Spain and Germany and France have in all modern times fought over the beautiful prize which lay so temptingly on their borders. It must, however, be admitted that small States, though unfavorable for any long-continued personal liberties, are the best soil for the growth of the higher products of the intellect—for the works of literature and the arts. It was not the grand empire of ALEXANDER, or the world-dominion of Rome which left behind them the fruits of pure intellect and the imagination which have been the delight of all succeeding times, but the petty communities of Attica. And we may with regret predict that a united Italy, though securing to millions of its citizens a freedom and security they did not know before, will never probably approach those works of poetry, painting, and architecture which have made the petty and jealous cities of north and central Italy, torn though they were by temporal dissensions, immortal in the history of human genius.

The final result of the struggle of centuries for the prize of Italy, was to leave the House of Austria in overwhelming preponderance in the north of Italy, and in fact, supporting the tyrannies of both the Pope and the Kingdom of Naples. A worse issue for the liberties or the development of the Italian people could hardly be imagined. History will record that the one and only service of the second French Empire to modern Europe, was its aid of the House of Savoy in its unequal struggle with Austria, and the consequent union of north Italy with the Kingdom of Sardinia. Through this timely and powerful assistance, the petty Kingdom of Sardinia, hardly a century and a half old, though led by a princely house, one of the most ancient in Europe, became the leader and the nucleus of Italy. GARIBALDI perfected what NAPOLEON had begun, and soon nothing remained to complete the unification of Italy but the small temporal sovereignty of the Pope. But this, for reasons of home policy, and perhaps with future ambitious projects of French domination in the Peninsula, the French Emperor would not permit to follow the destinies which her people and all Italy desired. France thenceforth became the sword-arm of the Pope, and the grand obstacle to the unity of Italy. The capitulation of Sedan, and the prostration of the Empire, removed this hindrance. With NAPOLEON'S overthrow fell the last temporal ally of the Holy Father. The Italian Government still hesitated, but the passionate desires of the people spurred them on. The Italian forces marched on Rome, and by a curious coincidence of names, entered the walls of the Holy City through a gap made by a breach in the Villa Bonaparte. With a trifling struggle, the event longed for during so many ages was consummated, and the Summer of this year saw, for the first time in nearly two thousand years, Italy again united from the Alps to Sicily, in one political Government. A monarchy which certainly dated from the time of CHARLEMAGNE, and perhaps earlier—fell without a crash, or with hardly notice from a world absorbed in grander events.

It is hardly sixty years since a Pope was dethroned, but that was by a foreign conqueror. This is a stroke dealt by his own people and his spiritual subjects. It will be one not easily retrieved. Italy is now one, and under a constitutional Government. The telegraph informs us that she is preparing wisely for the great struggle to preserve her unity, which is before her when France recovers. She is exchanging her expensive standing army for the cheaper national army of the Prussian system. Every citizen must become a soldier. Then, with lower taxes, a more martial population, freed from the rule of priests and under a limited monarchy, Italy may reach a prosperity and liberty which she never knew under the Roman Empire, or the stormy dissensions of the Middle Ages, or the degrading Governments of modern times.

The Ballot Box and the Judiciary.

There is one lesson taught, or rather strongly brought home to us, by the recent conviction of TERENCE QUINN by the United States Court, which we cannot ponder too seriously—more particularly as the people of this State will in a couple of years have another opportunity of saying whether or no they are satisfied with an elective Judiciary, or, in other words, with the State Courts as they are. Everybody acknowledges now that it is not possible, with the legal machinery provided by the State, to punish fraudulent practices at elections, when they are committed by members of the majority. It is safe to say that this is not only true of the State of New-York, but of every State in the Union in which the Judges are elective. Of course in the country districts, in which manners are still pure, the population educated, intelligent and well to do, the evil is now, and always will be, less rife than it is in the large cities; and the defects of our elected Courts as regards this duty are, therefore, less apparent. But it is quite certain that the success in cheating which had attended Democratic efforts here, and the way in which the State Courts had been robbed of all terrors for evil-doers in this particular matter of election frauds, would speedily have introduced similar practices into every city in the Union in which the majority was as ignorant and vicious as Democratic majorities in great cities usually are. The whole machinery of popular government in our great centres of wealth and population would have become a disgusting farce if Congress had not interfered.

But is it not disgraceful that Congress should have to interfere? Is it not most extraordinary that a great self-governing community like New-York cannot provide the means of punishing the violators of its own laws, and those laws, too, passed for the protection of the most important of all the processes of our political life, the election of public officers? Is it not too bad that even the Republicans of the country districts should have been as lukewarm, as they were when the Constitutional Convention met, about putting an end to a system which has brought us to the pass which made it necessary to carry QUINN before Judge WOODRUFF? It must be remembered that "repeating," and other offenses of a similar character, are punishable by State laws. The sole reason why Congress had to take charge of our elections, is that we could not get the State laws enforced, and the reason why we could not get the State laws enforced was that Judges elected by universal suffrage, and dependent on the Tammany Ring for renomination, could not be got to give decisions adverse to the interests of the dominant party. What gives the Federal Judiciary its value in the matter is not that it is Federal, but that it holds office for life. If our State Judges held office for life, or were only removable by a change in the Constitution, most assuredly we should not have to go into the Federal Courts to have our repeaters brought to justice. There are on the New-York Bench plenty of men as good as any on the United States Bench, and the United States Judges are chosen from among just such men as, we are glad to say, evil as the times are, still compose the bulk of the New-York Bar; but we have a judicial system which really, except in the case of the Court of Appeals, seems framed to stimulate whatever is bad in the Judge's nature, or paralyze what is good. The result is that we have to go to the United States Courts to protect the purity of our elections, and we are only saying what every lawyer knows to be true, when we say that we would all go there, too, for the protection of our property, if we could. As it is, every case involving large interests, in this City at least, which can by any twisting or turning of constitutional provisions be got into the Federal Courts, is got into them. In other words, not only has the experiment made in various States, of an elective Judiciary, with short terms of office, been proved a failure; but the system of appointment, or life tenure, is an acknowledged success. Wherever people have the choice between the State Courts and the Federal Courts, they choose the latter; and this not because the Federal Judges are always more learned lawyers, or more upright men than the State Judges, but because they sit under a system which insures their independence.

Democratic orators are constantly prating about centralization of late years. Centralization is indeed almost the only theme they do not find too delicate to handle. But if there be any tendency to centralization, it is Democratic politicians who are creating and fostering it. The danger of centralization does not lie in what men in Congress say or enact, but in what people through the country feel. The great ends of government, after all, are security for life and property, and for the free play of the faculties. As long as State laws and State Judges provide this, within the limits prescribed by the Constitution, we may rely upon it local self-government will have too many attractions for the popular mind to make it possible for Congress to encroach on it. But only let rascally politicians succeed in doing what they are doing in New-York—diffusing through the community a deep sense of insecurity, with regard not only to their possessions and their persons, but with regard to the enjoyment of their political rights—and the seeds of centralization will indeed be sown. If anybody wants to see the four men who have done most to promote centralization in this State, he must take a look at HOFFMAN and TWEED and BARNARD and CARDOZO. There is worse injury done to State rights in Room No. 13 in one day than Congress could do in ten years.

Two Scenes in English Life.

Some time ago we had occasion to refer to a remarkable statement of Prof. HUXLEY'S, made, if we mistake not, before the British Association. Prof. HUXLEY declared that there were thousands of people in Liverpool and other English towns more barbarous than the savage aborigines of Australia or New-Zealand. Melancholy corroborations of this apparently extreme assertion have since reached us. It seems, however, that this condition of things is not confined to the towns. The barbarism is not alone that of the Bedouins of the street—the beings whom want and drunkenness, and the lack of parental care, have driven to prey, in the coarsest and lowest ways, upon society. A degradation as pitiable exists in the English rural districts. Under the head of "Savages in North Devon," we find in a leading journal of London a description which, without good authority, might at once be stamped as fictitious. Several witnesses concur in testifying to its accuracy, and we are forced, therefore, to believe that in the England of VICTORIA and the nineteenth century, human beings are living in as low a scale of intelligence, and as far from the usages of civilization, as the least fortunate of their countrymen in the dismal period that succeeded the Norman conquest.

One family, which is particularly described, dwells at a place called Neymet Rowland. It consists of an old man and woman, a son, three unmarried daughters, and a numerous brood of small children. The family live in an ancient stable, which has neither windows nor doors, but is propped up by posts. There is no sleeping-room in it—the whole party herding together at night in a pit dug in the ground. In Summer these unhappy people are seen pretty much in a state of nature, and their actions are unrestrained in the slightest degree by any of the ordinary usages of decorum, or even decency. They seem to subsist on the coarsest food, cooking little and seldom, and never washing their few miserable garments. If any one approaches their dwelling they assail him with the utmost ferocity. Several persons have been severely injured by them, so that now they are never visited or interfered with. They possess fire-arms, and do not scruple to use them. The clergyman of the parish has made efforts to see and to reclaim these people. But they receive him with oaths and imprecations, and he is glad to escape from them unhurt. If modest women pass within ear-shot they are greeted with odious and obscene shouts. The daughters of the old man and woman are huge and strong, and "have the voices of males." They use the foulest language to passers-by who may be obnoxious to them, and often assault with alarming vigor those whom they dislike. Encounters between them and their neighbors are frequent, and several members of the family have been imprisoned for various offenses. They invariably return, however, to their former life and habits. "Missionaries in foreign lands," says the paper we have mentioned, "never encountered a tribe of savages who required civilizing more than this wretched tribe of people in North Devon!"

This, it would seem, is not a case of degradation through poverty. The family own, we are told, no fewer than thirty acres of freehold land, and this it is which renders it so hard to deal with them. But most of the instances of barbarism, such as are complained of by Mr. HUXLEY and others, spring from pure want. The last post brought us an account of an inquest just held at Bethnal Green, the details of which are enough to make one blush for humanity. The dead man was a house-painter, a widower, with two small children. His wife had died a short time before, leaving him with these little girls, aged, respectively, two and a half and six. The man fell ill with painter's colic, and, being without money, literally died for want of medicine. When first attacked he went to the relieving officer. He was told that this person "was out, and would not be in for some hours," and there was no one to act in his place. Next day the landlady went to the relieving officer, obtained an order, and took it to the parish doctor. This gentleman sent his assistant. But the assistant did not go, although the sick man's brother went four times to beg him to do so. At his last visit, the brother told this model physician that the patient was foaming at the mouth, and could not swallow. To which the doctor made answer, "I won't be a minute. Give him some castor-oil." The messenger said that as his brother was dying, he thought castor-oil could do him no good; that in any case he had no money to buy it, and implored the doctor to go at once. At last the doctor did go—many hours after he was first summoned. The painter was dead—and had died in lingering agony. He lay there, stiff and cold, with his two starving little children sobbing over and clinging to his body. In the words of the report:

"The two little daughters of the deceased were in the room while their father was dying, and the oldest caught hold of his hand and screamed violently. After their uncle left the room—which on Saturday evening they and the corpse of their father occupied—they were left for the whole night with the dead body. On Sunday forenoon they were found to be, when visited by Mr. BURROWS, in a starving condition, and there was no food in the room. They have been removed to the workhouse."

Comment from us could add nothing to the horror of a scene like this, so disgraceful to England and all its boasted "institutions for the relief of the poor." A curse hangs over the land in which such barbarities are possible. The surgeon, who ought to have seen the poor painter, had too much to do that day, it is said, "and so was not greatly to blame." But the terrible fact remains that in a Christian country, a country overflowing with wealth, a human being should thus be suffered to die in torment, his shrieks, as it were, ringing in the ears of the officials whose duty it was to succor him. It cannot be denied that instances like this furnish arguments to the advocates of communism which, in the absence of better methods of relief than now exist, the increasing density of population in England will render it more and more difficult to answer. "Property" everywhere is forgetting its duties, and some of these days it will have no duties left to perform.

MINOR TOPICS.

As the City is still a dependency of the Ring's, Mayor HALL very naturally used the public streets, last night, as his private property. The moment his election was assured, he caused bombs to be discharged in all the principal thoroughfares, and so gave the citizens to understand that their masters were still TWEED, SWEENY, and HALL. The bulk of the tax-payers will enjoy just such liberties as the Ring may think proper to allow them, and no more. This state of affairs will probably last until a remedy somewhat stronger and more effectual than an election is applied to TWEED and his friends. In the meantime, the City will present a very fine example of the results of government according to "Democratic" institutions.

The Herald yesterday, in the course of a general onset in behalf of Tammany—and it has rendered far more efficient service to the Ring than the miserable World throughout the canvass—made the following remark with reference to the Controller's accounts and the whitewashing report: "If the testimony of such men as JOHN JACOB ASTOR and MOSES TAYLOR be not true, then these gentlemen must be consummate scoundrels." We distinctly assert that their testimony is not true—now if they choose to put the cap made by the Herald upon their heads, it is not our business to prevent them.

It is to be hoped that the day will come when the Ex-Empress EUGENIE will be allowed to be at peace in her exile. The foreign newspapers are perpetually starting strange rumors about conspiracies hatching at Chiselhurst, and accusing the Empress of being really responsible for the apparent treachery of BAZAINE at Metz. At last the Empress has caused a semi-official statement to be put forward in the London Daily News. She declares that she "has taken no part in any one of the combinations having for their object either peace or an armistice." Perhaps the several parties immediately concerned in the present war will now agree to confine hostilities to the arena of France, and not pursue an unhappy lady with vindictive calumnies.

The capitulation of Verdun is a disaster to the French which slight successes on the Loire cannot counterbalance. The entire extent of the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, as anciently defined, is now commanded by the German troops, not a single fortified position of importance being held against them. With the fall of Neu-Breisach and Belfort the last vestige of resistance in the subject provinces will disappear.

Large numbers of fraudulent voters have been passed over the Erie Railroad during the last few days at the expense of W. M. TWEED. A party of repeaters was also brought from Philadelphia. In fact, the Democratic preparations were on an extensive scale, and we have no doubt the election has cost the Tammany leaders about half a million of dollars more than usual—for which drain upon their purses they may thank us. While they are literally intoxicated with victory and whisky, it would be useless to say much to them. But by the time they are sober, it may be expedient to pay them a little attention again. We may very safely promise that they will take good care to make their mastery over the City felt in every direction. We have not yet seen the beginning of what they can do in the way of misgovernment and corruption.

The system of carrying the mails from point to point in this country is so fraught with inconvenience as to suggest the hope that a vast improvement will some day be demanded. There is no good reason why a person should be able to go from Brooklyn to Chicago, and carry a message in half the time the Post-office would require to deliver it. This is the state of affairs at present. Of course, the expense of sending by express is considerable, but the advantage of cheapness attained by the postal system is not inconsistent with moderately quick dispatch. Post-office reforms are among the most indispensable of our time, and it seems impossible to postpone them much longer.

An outrage has been committed on the Pacific Railroad which seems to have caused some excitement in San Francisco. Five men stopped a train and robbed it of $3,100. What an affair to make a fuss about! We should scarcely mention it here. We have seen a smaller party than five men steal an entire railroad, and work it for their own exclusive profit for years together, with Judges to help them, and the public calmly looking on. The people of San Francisco are getting to be so moral that it does not take much to surprise them. We should like to make them a present of JAMES FISK—he would soon show them a trick or two really worth talking about.

The peripatetic diplomacy of M. THIERS seems to have given him an immensely increased opinion of his own importance. The Ex Minister of LOUIS PHILIPPE writes to the Pope as if he inherited the political influence which belonged to NAPOLEON III, in his palmiest days. PIO NONO must feel immensely gratified to learn that "his case,"—hopeless as it seems—is to be "considered" at a forthcoming European Congress, of which M. THIERS appears to have had the earliest intimation. As the position of eldest son of the Church is at present vacant, the veteran statesman is probably desirous of establishing a claim to it. We suspect, however, that Signor BROGLIE'S recommendation to the Italian Government to retain the capital at Florence, during the lifetime of the present Pontiff, will be a more consoling piece of intelligence to the inmate of the Vatican than the patronizing assurances of his dear friend M. THIERS.

Count BISMARCK appears to be a determined advocate of retrospective justice. He lately ordered researches to be made with a view to ascertain "the amount of money contributions and requisitions of all kinds levied by the French between the years 1806 and 1813, in the present provinces of the Prussian monarchy." Returns have been forthcoming from part of the specified territory, which give a total equal to about $200,000,000 in gold. After these are completed, the North German Chancellor will probably order statistics to be prepared of the pecuniary damage received by Germany from the Generals of LOUIS XIV. One feels a natural curiosity to know whether Prussia pays as much attention to the other side of the account, and keeps for example an accurate profit and loss statement touching her recent acquisitions of Hanover and the Grand Duchies, not to speak of the older transactions with reference to Poland and Silesia.

THE ELECTIONS.

came generally known or was credited by those who sought to prevent their entrance into the City. These troops were intended for the protection of the Government offices and buildings in case of any extended disturbance, which happily did not occur. The frigate Narragansett was stationed in the East River near the foot of Wall-street, and it was understood that she would be used to sweep the street to protect the United States Treasury. The iron-clad Guerriere lay in the North River, near Chambers-street, for any service that might be required. Both vessels were the objects of much attention from those who were in the vicinity of their anchorage, but no especial signs of life on board were noticeable. The marines from the frigates were consolidated with those in barracks at the navy-yard, and the other troops were kept in garrison in the harbor, in readiness for instant service, which was not called for.

At Police Head-quarters—The Governor and the Mayor Waiting for the News.

At Police Head-quarters the day was one of sepulchral quiet. Early in the morning Superintendent KELSO was at his post, with Inspectors DILKS, WALLING and JAMESON gathered about him, and with Capts. SPEIGHT and COPELAND at hand as special aids. But beyond listening to pleasing but apocryphyal tales of Tammany triumphs brought in from time to time by superficial observers of the progress of the voting, they had nothing whatever to do. Occasionally Captains of Police dropped in to have some very simple order explained, or to ask how they were to act if some possible but highly improbable contingency should arise. But beyond this Superintendent KELSO had little demand upon his time, which he spent in patiently waiting for the disturbance which never came. In all the other offices there was the same absence of excitement, even including that of Judge BOSWORTH, where Gov. HOFFMAN and Mayor HALL waited calmly and smilingly for the victory both confidently expected. Gov. HOFFMAN did, indeed, betray considerable interest in the unusual perils attending the Tammany pastime of repeating, as he spent a portion of the day in the office of Superintendent KELSO drinking in with greedy ears the tales of alleged misdeeds of United States officials, which were plentiful enough in that locality at all hours. One story coming up of an attempt by a deputy marshal to shoot Police Capt. MCDONNELL, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, and the pistol being produced as proof of the fact, the Governor thought the affair of such moment that he proceeded with it to the office of Marshal SHARPE, and, showing the pistol, eagerly asked what it was. The Marshal, profoundly astonished at the ignorance of a Tammany Democrat of such affairs, said simply that it was a United States navy revolver. The Governor then asked the Marshal if he thought it was a proper thing to put in the hands of drunken men, to which the Marshal answered that it certainly was not, nor had it been done. The Governor, finding that he could make nothing by his braving show of indignation, took the pistol back to Police Head-quarters, where it was ostentatiously displayed during the rest of the day as a positive proof that the honest citizens of New-York were depositing their ballots under the shadow of Federal bayonets.

Arrests by the City Authorities—Judge Dowling's Refusal to Stand by the Compact—Deputy Marshals in Custody—A Man Shot.

CHARLES O'CONNOR, WILLIAM H. GREENE, PATRICK COFFEE and FRANCIS FITZPATRICK were arrested, yesterday, in the Fourth and Sixth Wards for illegal voting. The first three prisoners were remanded for examination by Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, as the inspectors ordering the arrest could not appear to prefer complaints. FITZPATRICK was accused of being a convict from State Prison, and consequently disfranchised. The Magistrate ascertained, however, that the prisoner had served in the Penitentiary, and had not lost his right to vote; consequently he was released, and went on his way rejoicing.

Justice DOWLING, having visited Police Headquarters and interviewed the Superintendent, went down town yesterday morning and was escorted round the Sixth Ward by Capt. KENNEDY. Orders were then given to each of the squads at the polling places to arrest all disorderly persons. Officer DOLAN, of the Sixth Ward, arrested PETER ROBINSON, colored, at the Eighth District, because he made a noise and threatened to strike a boy, and also for preventing persons from depositing ballots.

WM. HENRY, alias "Ballot," and THOMAS CONWAY, were arrested in the Tenth District of the Sixth Ward for creating a disturbance, and CONWAY assaulted THOMAS MAHER. MARCUS M. BYRNE was arrested by Officer WILSON, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, in Washington-street, for creating a disturbance at the polls. All of these men were promptly committed by Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs.

Dr. WM. T. NEALIS, the physician at the Tombs Prison, caused the arrest of JOHN TEIRNEY, aged seventy, of No. 11 Mulberry-street, for having voted at the Tenth District of the Sixth Ward when not registered. PATRICK HEFFERNAN, a Deputy United States Marshal, was also arrested at the instance of the Tammany doctor, on a charge of having persuaded TEIRNEY to vote illegally. When the prisoner was arraigned before Justice DOWLING at the Tombs, the Magistrate was quite eager in ordering them to be fully committed for trial, in default of bail. In accordance with arrangements made by Superintendent KELSO and Marshal SHARPE, a request was sent by both of these gentlemen to the magistrate to send HEFFERNAN to Police Head quarters. Justice DOWLING, as a Sixth Warder, betrayed considerable heat in refusing to accede to the request, and the prisoner remains in the Magistrate's custody.

DANIEL L. GRIFFITH was arraigned before Justice DOWLING, on the complaint of THOMAS WELSH, of No. 250 Greenwich-street, who accused the prisoner of having attempted to vote illegally in the First Ward. He had contradicted himself when questioned. The complainant was questioned by the Magistrate, and stated that he knew nothing as to the truth of the prisoner's statements, nor did he know whether he was illegally registered or not. The prisoner was accordingly discharged.

JOHN FRETILE, of No. 137 Washington-street, was arrested at the Second District of the First Ward, for illegal voting, he having served a term of years in the Clinton State Prison. A certificate of reduction of time for good behavior was found in the possession of the prisoner. When arraigned before Justice DOWLING, the accused stated that he had asked several of his associates if he could vote, and they had assured him he could, as he had not served out his full term. The Magistrate explained that the certificate shown was not a pardon, and remanded the prisoner for trial.

JOHN CONNOLLY presented himself at the Ninth District poll of the Fourth Ward, in Cherry-street, and offered to vote as residing at No. 343 Water-street. JOHN SLATTERY caused his arrest, as he was not the person who had registered under that name. When in the Station-house the prisoner gave his residence as Ward's Island, and while before Justice DOWLING changed it to No. 343 Washington-street. He was fully committed for trial.

CHARLES MOORE, a prominent Young Democrat, was arrested, yesterday morning, on a warrant issued by Justice DOWLING, on a charge of having, on the 18th ult., drawn a pistol upon PATRICK CANTLIN, of No. 57 Greenwich-street. The arrest was made at the polls, and the Magistrate rendered the politician useless by holding him for examination.

Detective DUNNE, of the Central Office, arrested JOHN FALLON for having accosted a man in Broadway in a threatening and menacing manner. Justice DOWLING held the prisoner for examination.

JOSEPH MCGLOIN and JOHN J. SWEENEY were arrested in the Fourteenth Ward for obstructing the polls in the Fourteenth and Seventh Districts. They were remanded by Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs.

TIMOTHY O'CONNOR and PETER MULLANEY were arrested in the Sixth Ward for disorderly conduct at the polls of the Tenth District, and engaging in a fight.

LAWRENCE CUNNINGHAM was arrested at the Twenty-first District of the Sixth Ward for making a noise and disturbing the public peace.

JAMES HENRY, of No. 492 Pearl-street, being found intoxicated near the polls of the Second District of the Sixth Ward, was arrested for obstructing the polls. All of the accused were held by Justice DOWLING.

About 11 o'clock yesterday JACOB A. HEALY, United States marshal, arrested a man, whose name was not ascertained, at the polling-place in the Fourth Election District of the Thirteenth Ward, on a charge of interfering with the voters. While conveying him to the station, a large crowd of the adherents of THOMAS J. CAMPBELL attacked him violently with stones and sticks and rescued the prisoner from his custody. He ran to the corner of Delancey and Columbia streets, and turning quickly round discharged a revolver into the midst of his pursuers. The shot harmed none of the crowd, but took effect on an old man named JACOB VITTER, residing at No. 254 Delancey-street, striking him on the head and rendering him insensible. Surgical treatment was speedily procured, and it was discovered that the bullet had produced a wound four inches in length, which, in all probability, will prove fatal. HEALY was arrested by Officer WHITE, of the Thirteenth Precinct, and was arraigned before Judge SCOTT, at the Essex Market Police Court. He admitted the offense, but urged in mitigation that he was compelled in self-protection to draw his revolver, as he was beaten and cut by the mob, and was apprehensive for his personal safety. He was committed without bail. No other arrests were made in connection with the occurrence.

JAMES ADAMS, special policeman for the Fifth Election District of the Seventeenth Ward, arrested EDWARD MATHEW for taking a ticket out of the hand of a voter. MICHAEL DONOGHUE endeavored to effect a rescue, when ADAMS dealt him a heavy blow on the head with his baton, necessitating his removal to the hospital. A complaint was lodged against them at the Essex Market Court, and the prisoners, who were both United States marshals, were committed for trial without bail.

JAMES PURCELL, a United States marshal, was arrested at a polling-booth in First-avenue on a charge of interfering with voters at the instance of JOHN HEFFERMAN, a special policeman. Judge SCOTT committed him for trial.

In the Twenty-second Precinct THOS. BURNS was arrested for fighting. FRANK FAVELL for disorderly conduct, and FRITZ FESTNERT for illegal voting.

In the Twenty-first Ward a man named ROONEY, a notorious rough and political bully, was arrested for firing into the crowd around the polling-place. He has done the State service for a couple of years at Sing Sing, for shooting a man named KELLY, in Second-avenue, about two years ago.

BERNARD MCQUAID, a United States marshal, was arrested by JOHN BUTTERLAKE, in the Fourteenth Election District of the Seventeenth Ward, charged with drunkenness and creating a disturbance. He was held to answer.

WILLIAM H. CURRY, charged with disorderly conduct and interference with voters in the Fourth District of the Tenth Ward, was held for trial.

JOHN RYAN was arraigned before Justice SCOTT, at the Essex Market Police Court, on a charge of perjury and illegal voting. It appeared that the prisoner presented himself at the Fourth Election District of the Fourteenth Ward and offered to vote. His qualifications were challenged, and having been formally sworn he testified that he resided at No. 340 Delancey-street for upward of a year. An investigation showed that the house in question was a factory, and the prisoner had no connection with it. He was sent to prison, bail being refused.

WILLIAM H. BARRETT, charged with drunkenness, in the Fourth Election District of the Seventeenth Ward, and JACOB NAGLE, with disorderly conduct at a polling-place in AVENUE A, were both held by Judge SCOTT, at the Essex Police Court.

EDWARD V. O'HARA was arrested for interfering with voters in the Thirteenth District of the Tenth Ward, and held to answer.

WM. HOLTON, a United States marshal, was arrested in the Ninth District of the Thirteenth Ward for alleged disorderly conduct and assaulting the officers. He was held for trial.

JOHN. J. BURHARDT, a liquor-dealer on Essex-street, was held to answer by Judge SCOTT for selling spirituous liquors, contrary to the regulation.

JOHN B. THOMAS, about eighteen years of are, was arraigned at the Jefferson Market Court, before Judge FOWLER, for registering in the Fifth Election District of the Twenty-ninth Ward. The prisoner stated that he was justified in voting, as he had done so last year. The Judge committed him for examination.

A gentlemanly-looking individual, named STEPHEN W. DANA, who stated his residence to be No. 190 Spring-street, was brought before Judge FOWLER, at Jefferson Market Court, for fraudulent voting in the Thirteenth District of the Fifteenth Ward. When registering, the prisoner stated that he resided at the St. Denis Hotel, and an inquiry yesterday showed he did not live there. The prisoner explained that he was but recently returned from Europe, and was unacquainted with the custom here relative to registration. He satisfied the Judge that he had no intention to vote fraudulently, and he was discharged.

JEFFERSON WHITE was charged before Judge FOWLER with fraudulent voting and perjury. HARMAN CARROLL, a Police officer, attached to the Eighth Precinct, stated that WHITE presented himself at the Seventeenth Election District of the Eighth Ward, having registered at No. 27 Sullivan-street. He was sworn as to his qualifications, and on inquiry he was totally unknown at the address in question. He was held to answer.

GEORGE A. WILSON voted in the Thirteenth District of the Fifteenth Ward as a resident of the district. On examination he admitted that he had removed to another ward some time since, and he was arrested. Judge FOWLER committed him for trial.

JAMES HUBBARD voted in the Sixteenth District of the Eighth Ward, giving his address in the district. Subsequently he boasted of having hoodwinked the marshals, and he was arrested. He was held for trial.

JAS. DONALDSON, a United States marshal, was arrested in the Tenth District of the Eighth Ward by Capt. MCDONNELL, of the Twenty-Eighth Precinct, charged with a violent assault on MATHEW MCCLOSKEY, an inspector of election. While on the way to the Station-house DONALDSON drew a revolver, but was immediately disarmed and taken before Judge FOWLER, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, who committed him for trial in default of $1,000 bail.

PATRICK MANY was arrested in the Nineteenth Ward, by order of Supervisor FRANK BALL, and taken to the Station by Marshal MCKENZIE and a Police officer, where he was released by order of Capt. GARLAND.

PATRICK WHOLAN, a cripple from Ward's Island, was arrested in the Fifteenth District Twelfth Ward, for having voted in another man's name, the "Simon Pure" individual entering the poll before WHOLAN had left.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, on his way home, yesterday morning, voted in the Fifth District of the Thirteenth Ward. After breakfast, having also taken an additional horn or two, he thought he would go down and vote. His surprise on being informed of his having done so already was only equaled by his terror at finding himself in the hands of the Law for the offense.

FRITZ FURTMERZ, a native of Germany, was arrested yesterday afternoon for illegal voting at the Tenth District of the Twenty-second Ward. The prisoner presented fraudulent naturalization papers at the poll, and when challenged with regard to his right to vote confessed that he was not a citizen. He was detained at the Twenty-second Precinct last night.

JOSEPH HARTNETT, a United States supervisor of the Eleventh District of the Twentieth Ward, was arrested, yesterday, at the instance of GEORGE P. EDGAR, United States Marshal, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct at the polling-place. He was taken to the Station but was subsequently discharged by order of the Superintendent.

JOHN LONG, a laborer, residing at No. 306 East Thirty-second-street, had a quarrel, yesterday afternoon, with his wife, when he suddenly seized a knife with which he stabbed her in the abdomen. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital, where the wound was pronounced of a very critical nature. LONG was arrested.

The German Vote.

The prediction, as detailed in yesterday's TIMES, that a large increase of the German vote would be the result, now that the apathy of many German voters had been removed by the precautions which were taken against frauds at the ballot-box, was fully verified. Moreover, every German voter was more interested in the result of this campaign than on any previous occasion. Numerous Germans who never before voted the Republican ticket, cast their vote for the Saratoga nominees, as the only chance to destroy the undemocratic rule of the Tammany hierarchy, and to put an end to their affiliation with an element, which, on all occasions, has manifested its hatred of a German element. There was, however, no marked excitement among our German fellow-citizens, who quietly deposited their votes, and then resumed their respective vocations.

RECEIVING THE RETURNS.

At the Republican State Committee Rooms.

The Republican State Committee gathered in their rooms in the Fifth-avenue Hotel, last night, and kept open house there. The rooms and corridors of the hotel were crowded with persons anxious to hear the returns, which came in quite rapidly from the rural districts. There was much rejoicing over the cutting down of the Democratic majorities in several of the towns and districts of the State. A dispatch from Utica announced ROBERTS, Republican, elected by 1,000 majority. In Richford, Newark, Ledyard, Northeast, Hillsdale, Coeymans, Paterson, Marathon, Darien, Rega, Owego, Chester, Stuyvesant, Savannah, and other towns in Tioga, Cayuga, Columbia, Rockland, Chautauqua, and northern counties of the State, WOODFORD was credited with large majorities. Ellicott, Chautauqua County, gave him 564 majority; Ithaca gave him 120, and the Eighth District of Syracuse gave him 249 majority.

At the Republican Head-Quarters.

A large attendance was present at the head-quarters of the Soldiers' and Sailors' General Committee, corner of Twenty-second-street and Broadway, that body having surrendered the use of their room for the common benefit of its own and the members of the Republican General Committee. CHARLES S. SPENCER presided, and from time to time announced the condition of the vote. The increase in the Republican vote in several counties of the State was received with hearty applause, and at the conclusion, when Mr. SPENCER proposed three cheers for Gen. GRANT as the candidate for the Presidency in 1872, the audience responded with three cheers, loud, long and hearty.

At Tammany Hall.

Tammany Hall was surrounded last evening by a throng of people anxious to hear the returns as received by the sachems of that society. The Hall was not opened until 8½ o'clock, for fear, as the janitor expressed it, that the "dimmocracy would tear the hall to pieces." Upon the opening of the portals, the crowd surged in to the main hall, completely filling it.

CASPER C. CHILDS called the meeting to order, and announced the returns; as the Democratic gains were proclaimed, cheers were given for those counties giving large majorities, and faint applause followed the announcement of those counties giving smaller majorities. Capt. HYNDERS then came forward, and in response to inquiries of "who are you?" replied, "Who in h—ll are you, that you don't know me? If you had lived as long as I have you would know who 'old Ryndere's is." He said that with all the array of force and smell against them they had won the battle. They had a hard battle to fight, and if he had the power he would throw every officer of the United States into the river. Mr. HYNDERS further said that he hoped that business of repeating would not be again attempted as it had been before.

Returns were read from various portions of the State last night, but they created no enthusiasm except as particular districts were announced, which gave majorities for the Democratic ticket. Speakers were drummed up to keep the enthusiasm to the highest pitch, but the only foundation on which they had to work was the returns from the interior of the State, showing very small majorities for HOFFMAN. Dr. JAMES MADISON, of Missouri, essayed to speak, but was silenced by cat-calls and cries of "louder." Demands were made for HALL, TWEED and SWEENY, but these worthies were not near enough to respond. The tumult was allayed by some more returns, which were read by Mr. CHILDS.

A Democratic gain of one in Ogden was greeted with uproarious cheers. The assemblage then began to retire, and the hall was almost emptied. The black-board, which was stationed behind the President's chair, was not whitened by chalk once during the evening, and at times the suspense was almost painful. The Chairman and the "whippers in" of the Ring were observed in consultation over the returns as they were received at the telegraph instrument in the rear of the platform, and occasionally some enthusiastic assistant of the Chairman would advance to the front and announce cheering returns from some country district, which would be received with applause, after which the crowd relapsed into a state of expectancy. In announcing the returns the wonder was carefully to state the Democratic gains, which, though small, were thankfully received. About 11 o'clock the crowd in the hall thinned out to about 200, and these stood gaping anxiously toward the platform in the hope that each moment some one would come forward to revive their drooping spirits. Cries of "give us a song" met with no response, for the leaders were not musical. Shortly after the meeting broke up, and the crowd retired, evidently very much dissatisfied with their evening's entertainment.

IN OTHER STATES.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The General Results—A Republican Gain—Wendell Phillips Polls a Light Vote.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 8—10 P.M.—There is no doubt as to who will be Governor of Massachusetts next year. Returns from 116 towns show the following figures; CLAFLIN 29,974, ADAMS 16,998, PHILLIPS 8,964. The vote throughout the State is considerably in excess of that thrown last year, the same towns then giving 25,737 votes for CLAFLIN, 15,006 for ADAMS, and 5,491 for CHAMBERLAIN. In many towns Mr. PHILLIPS has polled a much smaller vote than CHAMBERLAIN did last year, who was an unknown man, and incapable of making a speech. Mr. PHILLIPS, who has spoken in nearly all the large towns and cities of the Commonwealth, taking his magic logic into every community where the questions of labor and temperance have been most fiercely and constantly discussed, has been enabled to show in many localities but a fraction of the vote which was cast for the unknown son of a Charlestown hotel-keeper. In Spicer PHILLIPS gets 63 votes, Chamberlain got 108. In Leicester, Phillips got 23, Chamberlain 48. In North Bridgewater Phillips got 245, Chamberlain 294. In Grafton Phillips got 112, Chamberlain 142. In Weymouth Phillips got 451, Chamberlain 612. These instances serve to show the tendency of the vote wherever the temperance question did not intervene, and in the latter cases the Phillips vote is almost universally polled at the expense of the Democratic Party, the Republicans suffering only trifling loss, as for instance in Gloucester, where Phillips had 215 votes to 6 cast for Chamberlain last year, but Claflin's vote is only 35 less than in 1869. The vote of Boston complete is as follows: Claflin 10,046, Adams 9,832, Phillips 1,876. Last year the vote was much smaller and widely different in results Claflin polling 7,792, Adams 10,946, Chamberlain 1,876. Both Mr. TWITCHELL and Mr. HOOPER, the Republican candidates for Congress in the Third and Fourth Districts respectively, are elected, the former by a plurality over Mr. GASTON of 531, the latter by a plurality over Mr. MORSE of 2,408. The Public Park act is defeated. The total vote was 9,257 yeas and 599 nays, which is less than the necessary two-thirds in favor of the act. Among the able and experienced members of the Republican Party who are elected to the House of Representatives of the State from Boston, are MOSES KIMBALL, CHAS. R. TRAIN, TIMOTHY DAVIS and NOAH KIMBALL. Outside the city are Rev. Dr. PUTNAM, of Roxbury; Rev. Dr. HILL, of Waltham, late President of Harvard College; GORDON BILL, the Springfield book-publisher, and JOHN E. SANFORD, of Taunton, formerly Insurance Commissioner of the State. RODNEY FRENCH, of Bedford, Republican Protectionist, is defeated. F. A. BYRD, of Walpole, is said to be elected by 45 majority. THEODORE H. SWEETZER, three years ago Democratic candidate for Governor, is defeated for the Lower House of the Legislature in Lowell. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS is elected to that body from Quincy. Gen. COGSWELL, Republican, is elected from Salem. There are many causes for felicitation on the part of the Republican Party to be found in the verdict of special localities, and in the figures of comparative majorities. There are also here and there minor matters for regret, but as far as Massachusetts is concerned we have every reason for pride and for rejoicing.

LATEST.

Half-past 12 A. M., Wednesday.—There is no doubt about the election of all the Republican candidates for Representatives to Congress, although no definite returns have been received. From all appearance the Second District, Mr. OAKES AMES', is the closest, but even there the desired result is not considered doubtful. The State Senate will undoubtedly be a little stronger Republican than last year, say thirty members out of forty. Our Labor Reform candidate from the Lynn District is elected, but this will be the only instance of the principle in this branch of the Phillips Party. Boston elects thirty Republican Representatives to the lower house of the Legislature, and nine Democratic members, which is a Republican gain of nine. Judge GOWLEY, the Labor Reform candidate for Attorney-General, is defeated for Representative in Lowell. The only Democratic member of the Executive Council last year, Peter Harvey, has been defeated, and that body will be unanimously Republican for the first time in four years. Thomas F. Temple, Republican, was elected Register of Deeds for Suffolk County. Claflin's plurality in Boston is 331. The total vote being 21,741. Horace H. Coolidge, the President of the State Senate last year, has been re-elected by a largely increased majority. Harvey Jewell, last year Speaker of the House of Representatives, was also re-elected. The only negro member of last year's Legislature has been re-elected. One of the State Senators elected in this city is W. D. PARK, the proprietor of the Park's H[illegible] adjoining the Adelphi Theatre Comique. The election has passed off with usual quietness in this city, and the returns from the different wards have been rendered with unusual promptness.

Claflin's Plurality Nearly 7,000—Large Majority in the Legislature, and All the Congressmen Republicans.

BOSTON, Nov. 9—2 A. M.—In 296 towns, Claflin has a plurality of 6,855 over Adams and Phillips. The vote in the above towns stands: Claflin, 72,455; Adams, 45,601; Phillips, 20,299. The towns yet to be heard from will increase Claflin's plurality. We have reports of 229 Representatives to the General Court divided as follows: Republicans, 161; Democrat, 35; Labor, 11; Prohibitionists, 2. The Senate has a Republican majority. The Republicans have carried the ten Congressional districts.

A Heavy Vote Cast—Voting in the Different Cities and Towns—Almost Uniform Gain for Claflin.

BOSTON, Nov. 8—Evening.—A very full vote was thrown at the State election today. Some of the results are as follows:

Boston foots up for Governor: Claflin 10,046, Adams 9,730, Phillips 1,806. Last year Claflin had 8,272, Adams 11,036, Chamberlain 497.

Chelsea gives Claflin 1,064, Adams 657, Phillips 231. Last year Claflin had 911, Adams 453, Chamberlain 52.

Charlestown gives Claflin 1,640, Adams 1,350, Phillips 434. Last year Claflin had 1,196, Adams 1,404, Chamberlain 139.

Fitchburg gives Claflin 633, Adams 343, Phillips 128. Last year Claflin had 631, Adams 269.

Worcester gives Claflin 2,400, Adams 1,554, Phillips 407. Last year Claflin had 1,737, Adams 924, Chamberlain 303.

Lynn gives Claflin 971, Adams 668, Phillips 1,383. Last year Claflin had 1,253, Adams 505, Chamberlain 1,035.

Cambridge gives Claflin 2,149, Adams 1,491, Phillips 880. Last year Claflin had 1,673, Adams 1,646, Chamberlain 41.

New-Bedford gives Claflin 1,418, Adams 795, Phillips 380. Last year Claflin had 1,690, Adams 507, Chamberlain 184.

Thirty-six towns, not including the above, foot up for Claflin 10,735, Adams 6,235, Phillips 2,982. The same towns last year gave Claflin 8,825, Adams 5,813, Chamberlain 1,772.

Representatives TWITCHELL and HOOPER are re-elected to Congress from the Third and Fourth Districts, comprising Boston, &c.

LATER.

Returns from 168 cities and towns give Claflin 47,068, Adams 21,986, Phillips 11,825. The same towns last year gave Claflin 35,411, Adams 20,632, Chamberlain 7,710. Claflin will have as large a majority as last year, on an increased total vote. His majority last year was 9,800. All the Republican Congressmen are re-elected. TWITCHELL, in the Third District, by about 300 plurality, and HOOPER, in the Fourth, by over 2,000 plurality. Both branches of the Legislature will be strongly Republican. Wendell Phillips has received less votes than his opponents conceded him. John Quincy Adams is elected to the Legislature.

ILLINOIS.

A Republican Victory in the Election of Congressmen.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—8 P. M.—Charles B. Farwell, the regular Republican candidate for Congress from this, the First District of Illinois, is elected by a majority of over 2,000 over John Wentworth, Independent Republican, who was supported by the Democrats and Free-trade Republicans.

The Republicans have also elected their legislative and county tickets, and have secured a majority of the city officers. Rain fell this afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—12 P. M.—Returns received up to this hour show that the Republicans have elected their candidates to Congress in the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Districts. The Sixth and Seventh Districts are also probably Republican, while the Eighth, Twelfth and Thirteenth are doubtful, although probably Republican. The Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Districts have been carried by the Democrats. Should it prove that the Republicans have carried the Thirteenth District, they will have made a gain of one member in the representation from this State.

Latest Returns—Republican Majority Twenty to Thirty Thousand—Congressmen, Ten Republicans, Four Democrats.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—Midnight.—At this hour, the returns from the various wards are not all in, but it looks as if O. B. FARWELL is elected from this District, by from 2,000 to 3,000 majority. The Republicans have probably carried the State by from 20,000 to 30,000 majority. As far as heard from, the following Republicans have carried the following Congressional Districts:

First—Charles B. Farwell.
Second—J. F. Farnsworth.
Third—H. C. Burchard.
Fourth—J. B. Hawley.
Fifth—E. C. Ingersoll.
Sixth—B. C. Cook.
Seventh—J. H. Moore.
Eighth—J. H. Merriam.

No returns or reports have been received from the other districts, but the Democrats have pretty certainly elected MCNEELY in the Ninth District, RICE in the Tenth, and MARSHALL in the Eleventh. The Twelfth and Thirteenth are disputed districts, but the chances are in favor of the election of HAY, (Rep.,) in the Twelfth, and CREBS, (Dem.,) in the Thirteenth. If this should prove correct the next delegation to Congress will stand ten Republicans to four Democrats the same as now.

DELAWARE.

Riotous Demonstrations In and About Wilmington—Returns from the Cities and Towns.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 8.—The election in this city progressed up to noon without disturbance. The colored people generally are voting and seem earnest in asserting their new rights. There are rumors of serious riots by white men at Odessa and Smyrna. It is stated that the deputy United States marshals at those places have been driven from the ground, the colored men prevented from voting and the ballot-boxes seized. There was more or less rioting in two wards of the city during the afternoon between crowds of white and colored men. At 5 o'clock a sharp encounter took place in which a large number of shots were fired. It is reported that a number of persons have been shot.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 8—Evening. The returns come in slowly. Wilmington City—Second Ward gives Pender, Dem., for Governor, 180 majority; Eighth Ward gives Coursey, Rep., for Governor, 114 majority; Ninth Ward gives Coursey 10 majority.

New-Castle County—New-Castle City gives 250 Democratic majority. Red Lion gives 2 Republican majority. West Red Lion gives 25 Republican majority. Georgetown gives Coursey, Rep., 31 majority.

Returns from the State show a general Republican gain over the vote of 1868, but not sufficient to change the result. Ponder, Dem., for Governor, has probably 500 majority, and Biggs, for Congress, nearly the same. The Republicans carry Newcastle County for the Legislature and on the State ticket.

MARYLAND.

A Quiet Day and a Heavy Vote—The Returns from Baltimore and Elsewhere.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—The election has proceeded in a most orderly manner. No arrests were made. A heavy vote is polled.

The first seven wards of this city, comprised in the Second Congressional District, give the following majorities: For Stevenson Archer, Democrat, First Ward, 924; Second Ward, 628; Third Ward, 626; Fourth Ward, 52; Fifth Ward, 204; Sixth Ward, 408; Seventh Ward, 915; total majority for Archer, 4,026. The Third District, composed of the thirteen upper wards, give the following majorities for Thomas Swann, Dem.: Eighth Ward, 1,000; Ninth Ward, 846; Tenth Ward, 375; Eleventh Ward, 256; Twelfth Ward, 306; Thirteenth Ward, 280; Fourteenth Ward, 396; Fifteenth Ward, 25; Sixteenth Ward, 17; Seventeenth Ward, 749; Eighteenth Ward, 277; Nineteenth Ward, 356; Twentieth Ward, 301. Swann carries all the wards of his district, and his majority over Booth is 4,965.

RHODE ISLAND.

Republican Congressional Elections in Both Districts—Arrests for Bribery.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—The Congressional Elections in this State took place today. In the Western District the vote was very light. James M. Pendleton, (Rep.) has 387 majority, with two towns to hear from. The vote stands: Pendleton, 1,457; Samuel Rodman, (Dem.) 941; scattering, 129. In the Eastern District no regular Republican nomination was made: Benjamin T. Eames (Rep.) has 4,965; Thomas A. Jenckes, (Rep.,) 1,771; Thomas Davis, (Rep.,) 1,006; N. Van Slyck, (Dem.,) 1,402; Benjamin Mumford, Temperance, 303; scattering, 19. Eames has 166 majority. Several arrests were made for bribery, and it is understood that the election will be contested for this cause.

MICHIGAN.

The Usual Republican Majorities—Loss of One Congressman.

DETROIT, Nov. 8—10 P. M.—The returns indicate the success of the Republican ticket by the usual majority. The indications are that Judge SUTHERLAND, (Dem.,) for Congress, in the Sixth District, is elected over JOHN F. DRIGGS, the returns so far showing that DRIGGS is running behind his ticket. The Republican Congressmen are undoubtedly elected in the other districts by large majorities. In Wayne County, including Detroit City, the [illegible] ticket, excepting for Sheriff which may go Republican.

[illegible]

DETROIT, Nov. 8—Midnight.—The Republican majority in Michigan is about 25,000. The Republicans [illegible] in the First Congressional District is somewhat reduced, but WALDRON is elected by a respectable majority. In the Fifth District the Democrats claim to have reduced CONGER's majority. In the Sixth District, SUTHERLAND, (Dem.,) is certainly elected over DRIGGS by from 3,000 to 4,000 majority. Dissatisfaction in the district among the Republicans has only extended to Congressmen. At this writing, only two wards in Detroit have been heard from, which give no idea of the general note.

MINNESOTA.

The Republican Members of Congress Elected.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 8.—In the First District, Mark H. Bunnell, Rep., was elected to Congress by 3,000 majority. In the Second District, J. G. Averill, Rep., is elected by the same majority.

WISCONSIN.

Election of Congressmen—Democrats Gain One Member.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 8.—In the First District, Mitchell, Dem., is undoubtedly elected to Congress over Judge Lyon, Rep. This is a Democratic gain. The Wisconsin delegation will show four Republicans and two Democrats, a Democratic gain of 1. Sawyer, Rep., in the Fifth District, is probably elected by an increased majority. Eldridge, Dem., in the Fourth District, is re-elected by about the same majority as formerly. All the other Republican Congressmen are elected by the usual majorities.

MISSOURI.

Indication of a Triumph for the Brown Ticket.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Dispatches from St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, St. Joseph, Jefferson City, Hannibal, Palmyra and Kansas City indicate the election of the Liberal Brown ticket by a considerable majority, and most of the members of Congress on the Liberal and Democratic tickets.

The ticket has been scratched so badly that it will take till a very late hour to complete the canvass.

NEVADA.

No Definite Returns—A Close Vote Indicated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—The Nevada election returns indicate a close vote, but it is impossible to obtain anything definite to-night. Virginia City, Reno, Wadsworth, Treasure City and Shermantown have gone Republican by a small majority. Both Democrats and Republicans claim Elko and Hamilton. Private dispatches say that Eastern Nevada has gone Democratic. Stoney counts about 200 Republican majority, showing a large Democratic gain.

NEW-JERSEY.

Republican Victory Throughout the State—Full Congressional Delegation Returned.

Elections were held in New-Jersey yesterday for five Congressmen, seven State Senators, members of the Lower House of the Legislature, and in some counties for local officers. In 1869, the Democrats carried the State by a majority of 4,347, of which majority 4,300 was obtained in Hudson County. The negro vote—about 6,000 in the State—was almost entirely cast for the Republicans, yesterday, giving them large gains in many of the counties. The election passed off with extraordinary quiet. But few arrests were made, and, so far as is known, there were no disturbances. The vote polled was very large, the election by the next Legislature of a United States Senator and the redistricting of the State having served to awaken public interest. At midnight full returns had been received from only six wards of Jersey City, and four wards of Newark, besides estimates based on the votes counted in some of the counties and townships. Taken altogether, the returns were such as to indicate a sweeping Republican victory. The leading men of the Democracy in Jersey City gave up the two Houses of the Legislature upon the returns received at 11 o'clock. Last year the Democrats had a majority of five in the Senate, and six in the Assembly. In the next Legislature both Houses will be Republican. Out of five Congressmen the Democrats had three; yesterday's election gives the Republicans four out of the five.

In the Fifth Congressional District Geo. A. Halsey, Rep., is undoubtedly elected. In Hudson County, which has hitherto given Democratic majorities, four out of six Republican Assemblymen are elected. James F. Felider, John Aness, George Warren, J. Hornblower and John G. Lyons. The only Democrat elected is Herrman D. Busch. Essex County elects eight out of nine Assemblymen.

John Hill, Republican, is probably elected in the Fourth District, over Phillip Rafferty, Democrat.

John Hopper, the Democratic candidate for Senator, in Passaic, is known to be defeated by Henry A. Williams, Republican.

In Middlesex County the Republican candidate for Senator, L. D. Jarrard, is elected, as are also the three Republican members of Assembly.

John W. Hazleton, the Republican candidate for Congress in the First District, which comprises the southern tier of counties, including the City of Camden, is elected by a majority of 4,000 over his opponent, Benjamin F. Lee. A dispatch from Camden, dated at 11 P. M., gives this as the probable majority, the only counties not heard from at that time being Atlantic and Cape May, each of which are Republican. The election of the Republican candidates for the Legislature in these counties—Benjamin H. Overhiser, (Atlantic,) and R. S. Leaming, (Cape May,) was regarded as certain.

Burlington County elects Henry J. Irick, Rep., to the State Senate by 640 majority. Two Democrats—Abraham Perkins and Levi French—are elected, and two Republicans—David L. Hall and Thomas C. Alcott, a Republican gain of one.

Camden County returns three Republican members of the Legislature—Charles Wilson, Isaac W. Nicholson and Stephenson Leslie. Majorities not reported.

Grosscup, Dem., is returned to the Legislature in Cumberland County; William A. House, Rep., is elected in the Second District by a majority of 300.

Hunterdon County gives a Democratic majority, electing Banghart to the State Senate, and three Assemblymen.

Both the Republican candidates are elected to the Legislature in Gloucester County.

The Second Congressional District elects EZE Get. Haswell, Rep., by a small majority. The District is now represented by a Democrat.

John T. Bird, Dem., is elected in the Third Congressional District, by a large majority, over Robert Ruaing, Rep. He is the present Representative.

In Mercer County, two Republican candidates to the Legislature are probably elected.

A. M. Bradshaw, Rep., is elected in Ocean County, by a small majority, to the Assembly.

In Sussex County the two Democratic candidates are returned to the Legislature, and R. E. Edsall to the Senate.

SOUTHERN STATES.

Tennessee—A Quiet Day and a Light Vote.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 9—3 o'clock A. M.—The election returns are imperfect and unsatisfactory. Maynard, Rep., carries Knox County by 138 majority; McMinn gives him 100; Bradley 100, UNITED ITALY.

Attempt at Reconciliation with the Clericals—The New Provinces of Italy—The King's Visit to Rome—The Relations with Spain—M. Thiers' Movements.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Saturday, Oct. 15, 1870.

The subject of most interest just now is that connected with attempts to calm the rage of the clerical party and reconcile it to the facts and circumstances of the new situation. None of the stories that you have heard about the walks and drives of the Pope about Rome have the slightest foundation of truth. The Pontiff has not, since the 20th of last month—the day the Italian troops entered—left the limits of the vast inclosure of the Vatican. The only open-air exercise he has taken has been in the gardens of the palace, which are sufficiently extensive to allow considerable liberty of movement. Pius IX., so far as we know from any evidence that yet comes to us, is as firmly resolved as ever not to yield. Until all hope of help from the outside is cut off, there is no probability that any terms will be accepted that the Italian Government can offer. It is a question of time; and to state the simple truth, of course, and the fractious child will be obliged at last to take into his hand and eat the large sweet cake which the new guardian is ready to offer. It is not true, that which the clerical organs are constantly asserting, that the Pontiff is a prisoner of the military authority. He is not even "held tight," but is at liberty to go where he pleases, and has been several times invited to show himself in Rome, so that he may receive the homage which all are ready to extend to him as the spiritual father and pastor of so many sheep. The Italian Government and people wish to keep the Pope in Italy where he belongs, and where he and they may be of mutual service to each other.

THE NEW PROVINCES OF ITALY.

According to the royal decree, issued at the moment of accepting the vote of the Roman populations, those provinces are declared to form an integral part of the Kingdom of Italy; and, to provide for a regular administration during the intervaljin which the unification is not perfected, Gen. LAMARMORA is to execute the commission of governing in the King's name. Preparations are actively making for the elections to be held of Deputies to Parliament, and the members of a regular municipal government for Rome and the other cities.

THE KING'S VISIT TO ROME.

The day is not yet fixed for VICTOR EMMANUEL'S visit to Rome. Great reckoning is made upon it, when it takes place, as a triumphal entry; more splendid as a spectacle, and of vastly greater moral value, than similar occasions preceding it—the processional entrance into Milan and Venice. The dispute is still going on about the Palace of the Quirinal Hill, as to any right, but that of force, which the King has to make it his residence. It is consecrated by too many memories of conclaves, and incidents intimately connected with the life of the Papacy, to make the sacerdotal party give it up without reluctance. The Palazzo Farnese has been spoken of, and it is said the Ex-King of Naples is ready to sell.

THE RELATIONS WITH SPAIN.

As you already know, the Spanish throne question has been revived in connection with the name of the Prince AMEDEO, the King of Italy's second son. The talk is still going on, with nothing, so far as we know, yet settled. A warning is uttered by journals of credit here against any such risky adventure as meddling with the Government of Spain by Italian Lieutenants of royal blood. The Italians have caution enough not to put themselves in the way of getting scalded by this boiling pot of Spanish politics. For the rest, there seems to be an inclination in the family of the Sovereign to give way to the weakness for new power. The passion has been pretty well pampered in the past ten years, and grows with what it feeds on.

M. THIERS' MOVEMENTS.

The visit here of M. THIERS, now for several days prolonged, promises to be as fruitless of immediate results as those made to other capitals of Europe. The venerable statesman has given much time to an inspection of the collections of art and the public monuments, and the acceptance of invitations. He has been received by the Sovereign and the Ministers in special audiences; but it is not believed that the conversations, under actual circumstances, are to be regarded as having great importance. M. THIERS w s one of the most obstinate opponents of Italian unity. A little while ago his name was as much as any other the object of ridicule and attack. Now it is mentioned with respect, and but slight allusion is made to the past. His proud country, borne down by disaster, is only the object of commiseration. It is understood here, as it has been all along, in connection with the communications had with the other Governments, that the scope of the mission is to obtain the good offices of the neutral Powers to save, if possible, the two Provinces to France, when terms of peace come to be established. The office which the patriotism of M. THIERS has led him to undertake, is a sad and almost hopeless one, as the determination seems to be general to let events follow their course. France must be content to be victim of conditions, as hard as those which, were she victorious, she would have imposed on others.

ANGELICO.

THOMAS CARLYLE.

The Historian's Views on the War—Congratulations to Germany.

The Weimar Gazette publishes a few extracts from a letter written by Mr. THOMAS CARLYLE, with reference to the war, in which he says: "Your anxieties about the war must have been of short duration; in fact they must, after the first few days' practical experience, have been changed into bright hope, into a hope increasing in rapid geometrical progression till it obtained its present dimensions. So far as my reading goes there never was such a war, never such a collapse of shameless human vanity, of menacing, long-continued arrogance, into contemptible nothingness. Blow has followed blow, as if from the hammer of Thor, till it lies like a shapeless heap of ruins, whining to itself, 'In the name of all the gods and all the devils, what is to become of us?' All Germany may look forward to happier days in a political sense, than it has seen since the Emperor BARABAROSSA left it. My individual satisfaction in all this is great, and all England, I can say all the intelligent in England, heartily wish good fortune to brave old Germany, in what it has accomplished—a real transformation into one nation, no longer the chaotic jumble which invited foreign intrusion of every ill-disposed neighbor, especially of that ill-disposed France which has inflicted on it such interminable mischief during the last 400 years—wars heaped upon wars without rest cause except insatiable French ambition. All that, through God's grace, is now at an end. I have, in my time, seen nothing in Europe which has so much delighted me. 'A brave people,' as your GOETHE calls them, and as I believe a peaceful and a virtuous one. I only hope that Heaven will send them the wisdom, patience and pious discretion to turn to a right use all that has been achieved."

Canadian Reciprocity—Action of a Committee of the Chicago Board of Trade—Resolutions that Were Not Approved of.

From the Chicago Tribune, Nov. 3.

A meeting of the Commercial Committee of the Board of Trade was held, yesterday afternoon, in the committee-room of the Chamber of Commerce, to consider the subjoined document, referred to that Committee by the Board of Directors. The members arrived slowly, and it was 4 o'clock before Mr. W. M. EGAN, Chairman of the Committee, called the meeting to order, and requested the Secretary to read the following call:

S. H. McCrea, Esq., President of the Board of Trade:

SIR: The House of Representatives of the United States having unanimously passed a resolution recommending the President to cause negotiations to be renewed with the Government of Great Britain, and pressed, if possible, to a definite conclusion, to regulate commercial intercourse between the United States and Canada, to adjust the fisheries question, so as to secure to our citizens the freedom of the in-shore fisheries of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and to enter into such arrangements as will make the River St. Lawrence a free outlet from the great lakes to the sea, and providing for the enlargement of the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals, to the requirements of the largest lake vessels, and the resolution having been unanimously indorsed by the Chamber of Commerce of the state of New-York, we deem it the duty of the Board of Trade of Chicago to give expression to their views upon the important matters comprehended in the question.

While, as good citizens, we desire to see an amicable adjustment of the fisheries difficulties, we are more immediately concerned in that portion of the question relating to the freedom of the St. Lawrence and the enlargement of its canal. Cheap transportation to the Atlantic is a matter of vital importance to the agriculturists of the West, and there is no doubt this can be best subserved by the freedom and improvements of the great natural water outlet, which, flowing from our doors, can convert our harbor, practically, into a seaport, and, in any event, secure to our producers a competitive route, which can regulate the cost of transportation and secure us cheap and economical freights.

We, therefore, beg to suggest that you bring the subject before the Board at as early a day as practicable; and we submit, herewith, a draft of a resolution which, we believe, correctly expresses the views of our business men here upon this important subject.

Your obedient servants,
GILBERT, FIELDS & CO.
J. F. GILLETTE,
SUMNEY, BRO. & CO.
LOW BROS. & CO.

RESOLUTION.

Whereas, The question of cheapening transportation between the interior and the seaboard sections of the United States is one of vital importance to the whole country, and especially so to the producers of the West; and,

Whereas, We regard the improvement of water facilities, and the opening of the River St. Lawrence to freedom of transit for the commerce of the United States, as the most feasible mode of relief to the Western agriculturists; therefore,

Resolved, That this Board most heartily indorse the resolution, unanimously passed by the House of Representatives of the United States, urging upon the President the necessity of opening negotiations with Great Britain, and pressing them to an early conclusion, with a view of securing to the commerce of this country entire freedom of transit to the ocean, via the St. Lawrence River; and that the Canadian authorities cause the enlargement and improvement of this route to the capacity of our largest lake vessels.

Resolved, That in securing the above object and the amicable adjustment of the fisheries question, we are in favor of extending to the people of Canada such equivalents of trade with the United States as will not be inconsistent with the welfare of our people considered as a whole.

Resolved, That the President of this Board be requested to cause copies of the foregoing resolutions to be sent to the President of the United States, and the Honorable the Secretary of State.

After a good deal of discussion pro and con, it was casually stated that a prominent attorney of Washington, who is in the employ of the Canadian Government, had acknowledged that he was pressing the resolutions, and that, in fact, they had originated with him, to aid the movement in favor of reciprocity. This statement being vouched for as true, the Committee expressed themselves unanimous in disapproval of the resolutions, and, without a dissenting voice, the motion was passed referring them back to the Board of Directors, with the recommendation that the Board take no action thereon.

The Committee soon afterward adjourned.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange, yesterday, (Nov. 8,) no business was transacted, although a few speculators, as usual, were in attendance. In the various brokers' offices there was but little seeming activity, the results of the election occasioning more discussion and absorbing a greater share of attention than affairs connected with real estate. After today, however, business will again revive, and the transactions of the next ten days, as indicated by the sales advertised to take place, will from their importance command notice, and in their results probably denote a period of unusual activity in the market.

HOSTILITIES ON THE LOIRE.

Advance of the Prussians on the Loire —A Battle in Progress Yesterday Near Orleans—The Result Not Given.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A dispatch from Tours, dated at 9 o'clock this morning, says, "Last night a Prussian column, with two batteries and 1,500 cavalry, attacked the outposts of the Army of the Loire, at Poisly and Laurent des Bois. The French, reinforced, drove them beyond Vallières. The Prussians left their dead and wounded on the field, and we took 64 prisoners. Our loss was 4 killed and 31 wounded."

ANOTHER REPORT.

TOURS, Nov. 8—Morning.—Dispatches from the Army of the Loire report a series of successful engagements yesterday at Poisly and St. Laurent des Bois. Two battalions of Prussians, supported by 1,500 cavalry and ten pieces of artillery, attacked the French advanced posts. After a combat of two hours' duration, as the French cavalry appeared to be surrounding them, the Prussians retreated, leaving two officers and fifty men killed, and seventy prisoners in our hands.

A BATTLE NEAR ORLEANS.

TOURS, Nov. 8—Evening.—A general battle was fought today near Orleans. All the ambulances here have been sent to the front. No news has yet arrived of the result of the fighting.

OPERATIONS AT OTHER POINTS

Capitulation of Verdun to the Prussians—French Batteries at Neu-Breisach Silenced—Movements in the East and North.

LONDON, Nov. 8—10 P. M.—The town of Verdun has capitulated to the Prussians.

NEUF-BREISACH.

Particulars of the siege of Neuf-Breisach show that Fort Mortier was destroyed by bombardment on the 6th, and the French batteries defending the town were dismounted. The French commander discontinued firing on Alt-Briesach, which was occupied by the Prussians.

LYONS.

Vigorous preparations are making at Lyons for defense. A great quantity of provisions has been collected, and all the able-bodied citizens have been thoroughly armed. All communication northward from Lyons has been cut by the Prussians.

IN THE EAST.

VERSAILLES, Fov. 8.—Gen. TRUSKOW reported to the Prussian head-quarters here yesterday, that his division had repulsed the France-Tireurs in several engagements on the 2d inst., between Colmar and Belfort. He reports also the occurrence of several skirmishes at Rougemont and Petit Magny, between the Prussians and the Guard Mobiles, in which the French lost five officers and 103 men. The French fortress of Belfort was invested on Thursday, the 3d inst, Communication with Gen. WERDER has been reëstablished.

THE NORTH.

TOURS, Nov. 8.—Dispatches from Rouen report successes for the French arms at several points in that quarter.

THE REJECTED ARMISTICE.

Bismarck on the Rupture of Negotiations—An Election Offered—A Majority of the Government Favor It—Trochu Opposes and Defeats It—German Views of the Responsibility.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Count VON BISMARCK has furnished the following explanation of the rupture of the negotiations for an armistice: The French Government having declared, through its representative, M. THIERS, its inability to accept the German offer of an armistice on the basis of the status in quo, the Count proposed that the French name a time for holding the elections for a Constituent Assembly. The Germans promised that in such event the absolute freedom of the elections should be respected, even in the territory now occupied by the Prussians. M. THIERS thereupon withdrew to the outposts to consult JULES FAVRE and Gen. TROCHU, but at length returned to Versailles without the power to accept the German offer.

TROCHU DISSENTS AND CARRIES HIS POINT.

Private advices just received from Versailles confirm the account given by Count VON BISMARCK of the suspension of the negotiations for an armistice. JULES FAVRE, together with a majority of his colleagues, favored the scheme for the election of members to the Constituent Assembly, and urged the acceptance of the armistice as negotiated by M. THIERS. Gen. TROCHU, the Commander of the Armies at Paris, dissented, and carried his point.

A BERLIN VIEW OF THE RESPONSIBILITY.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—All the Berlin newspapers, official and otherwise, throw the responsibility of the impending destruction of Paris on the French. The latter have thus far obstinately refused to recognize plain facts.

AN AUSTRIAN OPINION.

VIENNA, Nov. 8.—The Correspondence of this city asserts that the French Government acts as if it were unconscious of its defeat. Its tone and manner are the same as they would have been if the French Army had been victorious and were now before the City of Berlin.

PARIS.

The Armies of the Capital—Trochu's Confidence in the National Guard—King William Shuts off Communication—He is Reluctant to Bombard.

TOURS, Nov. 8.—The Paris Journal Officiel of the 6th, says: Of the three armies into which the combatants in Paris have been divided, two are intended for service outside the walls. One is under the command of Gen. CLEMENT THOMAS, and the other under Gen. BUCHOT. The army of the latter is composed of three corps d'armée, commanded respectively by Gens. VINOY, RENAULT and D'EXEA. The third army will be under the special command of Gen. TROCHU, who, at the same time, is Commander-in-Chief of all the armies.

AN EXPLANATION.

The Journal contains a note from Gen. TROCHU, explaining the inaction of Gen. SCHMITZ, during the disorders of the 31st ult. TROCHU states that he had given orders that the National Guard should alone interfere to preserve order; hence, the regular troops were not called upon. The note concludes with the assurance that the National Guard have amply justified by their behavior the confidence reposed in them by the General.

ALL COMMUNICATION STOPPED.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—King WILLIAM has issued an order that no person whatever will hereafter be allowed to enter or leave Paris. Five passengers have just been captured, and will be court-martialed for violation of the order.

THE BOMBARDMENT.

The Times this morning has reason to believe that the bombardment of Paris will not begin for two weeks. King WILLIAM is reluctant to destroy so grand a city, and is giving the French every opportunity to negotiate for peace.

AFFAIRS IN TOURS.

The Moniteur on Napoleon's Pamphlet —He is Accused of Violating the Truth —Newspaper Attacks on the Government—Thiers Expected.

TOURS, Nov. 8.—The Moniteur, reviewing NAPOLEON'S report of the causes which led to Sedan, says: "This apology touches us as the lament of an unfortunate. But truth has rights, as well as misfortune; and in the pamphlet in question truth is violated. Endeavoring to throw upon public opinion responsibility for the war, the author seems to forget the deplorable pains with which he encouraged the fictitious excitement which led to the war. All know that the Imperial Press most violently demanded war and the forcible annexation of Belgium, and that those papers were paid by NAPOLEON to keep up the cry. It is singular that the Emperor, who assumed entire command of the army, should plead that he was deceived as to its condition and organization." Other journals refer to the pamphlet as a proof of NAPOLEON'S overweening self-confidence and incapacity. The republican organs are particularly bitter.

ATTACKS ON THE GOVERNMENT.

The royalist journals commenced to attack the Government with violence as soon as it was known that the armistice had failed. The Gazette de France, (Legitimist,) is especially insulting in its personal allusions to GAMBETTA.

ESCAPED SOLDIERS FROM SEDAN.

A decree just promulgated orders all soldiers who escaped from Sedan to return to military duty within eight days. The requirement applies only to those untrammeled by the articles of capitulation.

M. THIERS—AN EFFORT TO REACH PARIS.

M. THIERS is expected to arrive here to-morrow. A balloon, under the direction of M. USSANDIER, started Sunday from the neighborhood of Rouen for Paris, with a fair wind.

MISCELLANEOUS.

French Prisoners in Germany—The Northern Coast—Reported Arrest of Baron Haussmann—Affairs at Marseilles.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The French prisoners are supplied with clothing by the Germans....The Prussian Government, which recently gave orders for the restoration of the lights and buoys at the mouth of the Elbe, has now countermanded these orders, and the work has consequently been suspended.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—It is said that Baron HAUSSMANN has been arrested.

MARSEILLES, Nov. 8, via LONDON, Nov. 8.—M. ESQUIROS reports that the people are now in complete submission to the Government authorities. He, therefore, submits his resignation, asserting that it is the duty of the hour to unite against the invader. The Mayor of the city has issued a proclamation, annulling all the acts of the Revolutionary Committee.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

MEXICO.

A Fierce Revolution in Guerrero—Illness of President Juarez—Changing Sentiment in Favor of the French Republic—Revolution in Tehuantepec—Prospects of the Coast Survey—A Duel.

HAVANA, Nov. 7.—Advices from the City of Mexico to the 29th ult., received by the regular mail steamer from Vera Cruz, bring the following intelligence: A terrible revolution had occurred in the State of Guerrero. The Government troops had been defeated, and reinforcements were being hurried forward from the capital. Mail communication in that direction had been interrupted. A revolutionary outbreak had also occurred in the State of Michoacan. The Northern States were complaining of excessive taxation. President JUAREZ had had a serious attack of illness, but was slowly recovering. Congress had passed the Tehuantepec Canal bill. Public sentiment was changing in favor of the French Republic. The Mexicans are chagrined at the failure of JULES FAVRE to open friendly communication. Under the new Mexican Amnesty law the prisoners confined for political offenses had been liberated. An attempt had been made to form a political party, with NEGRETE as its leader, but the movement excited little enthusiasm. The object was to nominate PORFIRIO DIAZ for the Presidency. The Government was employing suspicious tactics to defeat the claims of Americans against Mexico. A revolution had broken out in Tehuantepec against the State Government. The revolutionists numbered 3,000 or 4,000 fighting men, and lively times were anticipated. It is feared that the Tehuantepec Isthmus Canal-exploring expedition from the United States will have trouble with the revolutionists, and perhaps be compelled to stop altogether....A duel had taken place in Colima between a Peruvian and a Cuban. The former was fatally wounded. A volcanic eruption had occurred near Valsequillo, on the boundary line between Chuuhahua and Durango.

WEST INDIES.

Arms for Baez at Curacao—Quiet in Hayti and San Domingo—The Lottery in Porto Rico—Prussian and French Men-of-War at Havana.

ST. THOMAS, via HAVANA and LAKE CITY, Nov. 8.—Vessels arriving from Havana at this port are quarantined for twenty-five days.... The steamer Virginus and the schooner Billy Butts, from New-York, have arrived at Curacao, with cargoes of arms and ammunition, supposed to be in aid of an expedition against Baez. Several Dominicans were on board, and the utmost secrecy was observed. The vessels sailed on 17th....Hayti and San Domingo are quiet. At Porto Rico the lottery has been reinstated. The prospects of the crops are favorable.....A Prussian gun-boat and a French gun-boat have arrived at Havana.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

Another Robbery on the Pacific Railroad —A Train Stopped by Five Men—The Crittenden Tragedy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—A dispatch dated at Elko today says: On Saturday evening, the eastern bound train was stopped at Pequoss by five men supposed to be deserters from Camp Halleck. The engine and express-car were detached from the train and run a few miles ahead. The express-car was broken open, the messenger gagged, and $3,100 taken. A special train, with police and horses was immediately started from this point, and arrived at the place of the robbery a few hours later. A glove was found on the spot with the name of CARR printed on it. CARR is the soldier who killed a woman at Camp Halleck about two weeks ago, and escaped from the guard-house....Several arrests have been made of persons suspected of being concerned in the robbery near Reno....All the Courts adjourned today as a mark of respect for the memory of Judge A.P. CRITTENDEN. A charge of murder has been entered against Mrs. FAIR, who killed Judge CRITTENDEN.

The loss on the building is about $15,000, insured as follows: Franklin, Philadelphia, $1,500; Hide and Leather, Boston, $1,500; Corn Exchange, of New-York, and Imperial, of London, $2,500 each. Partial Destruction of Winona, Miss., by Incendiaries—The Murderers of Gen. Bradley Suspected.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 8.—A special correspondent of the Avalanche, at Winona, Miss., says: "A fire occurred here, last night, which destroyed the dry-goods store of Messrs. TOWNSEND & BROS. and Messrs. MORELLY & TOWNSEND, the confectionery and drug store of Messrs. WARD & DIXON, and the livery stables of Messrs. ESKEDGE & TOWNSEND. Suspicion rests on a party of fiends who murdered Gen. BRADLEY, yesterday, of having fired the town.

An Island of Silver on the North Shore of Lake Superior—Millions of Dollars Worth of Ore.

From the Duluth Minnesotian.

We have before alluded to the Silver Island of the north shore of Lake Superior, in the British Possessions, just below Thunder Cape, and some fifteen miles beyond Fort William. The island is quite small in dimensions—say 100 feet by 40—and the most of it is submerged at high water—a small part at one end is about eight feet above the lake level. This island was entered by the Montreal Mining Company as part of a tract embracing 108,000 acres. It was only last Summer that Capt. FREW and his company completed their bargain with the Montreal Company for the island, and secured it by paying, or agreeing to pay, $250,000 for the entire 108,000 acres. They went immediately to work at improving the mine in a "workmanlike manner." Their first step was to surround the island with cribs of timber, filled with stone, to serve as a break-water and an ice-breaker; and within these cribs a cofferdam was built, and puddled with clay, having the effect of making the whole interior of the island nearly water-tight, at least from the intrusions of the lake. The next step was to set up two large steam pumps, worked by steam, by which the inside was pumped dry, or nearly so, and it has since been found that a very little working of the pumps daily keeps the island clear of water entirely. Then they went to work laying bare the vein, and now have exposed seventy feet in length, and find it to be a true fissure vein, with perpendicular walls, the vein of silver matrix being calcareous spar with some little quartz intermixed. The vein is eight feet wide, and eye-witnesses from there state that for one-quarter of this width it will average seventy per cent. of pure silver. On the first trial, after the water was gotten out, six men took out $35,000 worth of silver in four days; and up to the latest accounts, the working has been continued at about this rate. Already 123 barrels of native silver, estimated to be worth $75,000 to $100,000, have been shipped. The yield of the mine, computed by the ton, is not less than $1 to the pound. The mine employs now about forty men, and the Company will increase their force immediately.

A Missing Steamer—A Number of Ladies on Board.

From the Savannah (Ga.) Republican, Nov. 8.

Some days ago Capt. TUCKER, who is well known in this city as having been in command of the steamer Sylvan Shore, shortly after the war, and an experienced seaman, left Fernandina, Florida, with a steamer which he had recently purchased at the North, for Tampa, for the purpose of carrying the mails between that place and Manatee, Smyrna and other landings along the Gulf coast. After proceeding as far as Musquito Inlet the engineer in charge of the steamer made an examination of the machinery and vessel, and pronouncing her unseaworthy, refused to proceed further with her. We also learn that the engineer who brought the vessel out from New-York refused to go to sea in her, and also pronounced her unseaworthy. The engineer was put out ashore at the inlet, when the steamer put out to sea. The keeper of the light-house saw the vessel outside and at anchor that evening, and supposed to be dragging anchor, as the water breaking over her, since which time nothing has been seen or heard of the steamer. Besides the crew, Capt. TUCKER, his wife and daughters, and Mr. JOHN CLAY and Miss GRISWOLD, of Fernandina, were on board. As there was a terrific gale prevailing at the time (the one that caused so much damage to shipping on the coast,) and as there has been plenty of time for the steamer to make some port, it is feared that she has gone down with all on board. There is great anxiety felt in Fernandina for the safety of those on board of the missing vessel. We sincerely hope that some tidings may be heard of her safe arrival, but if the report of her unseaworthiness is correct, we fear that she has met the fate of the Varuna and other vessels on that coast.

A Sensation Spoiled—That "Sole Survivor" of the United States Sloop Levant.

From the Washington Chronicle Nov. 8.

Our readers will remember the published statements made by a sailor to the commanding naval officer at Norfolk, Va., to the effect that he was the survivor of the ill-fated United States sloop Levant, and had been washed ashore, being wrecked from that vessel in the Pacific Ocean at the time of her loss, some twelve years ago. As the Secretary of the Navy had his attention called to the man's story, he notified Admiral DAVIS, at Norfolk, Va., to ascertain the truth of the same and promptly notify the Department. Yesterday a letter was received, stating the following facts and the extent of what has now been ascertained to be a hoax:

It appears that about nine days a mariner, named JAMESON, who had shipped on board the United States steam-ship Lancaster, and went to sea, was sent home on the Quinebaug, on account of sickness, and placed in the Soldiers' Home, at Philadelphia. For some reason he was subsequently transferred to the Naval Hospital, at Norfolk, Va., for treatment. On one occasion, while at liberty, he became interested, and represented himself to many persons as JOHN JAMESON, (with whom he had at one time sailed on the Constellation,) and recited his trials while living on a desolate island, and his being picked up by a British steamer, and return to the United States. As the story thus communicated by him was told to certain parties who had lost relations in the Levant, of course an anxiety was roused to learn from him all the particulars of the loss of that vessel. It did not take long to have the statements put forth by him in his drunken revelings exploded, as Dr. JAMES M. JARVIS, a brother of the JOHN JARVIS in question, was written to, and he replied that his brother, who was a carpenter in the navy, is known to have been lost in the United States sloop Levant, and that the statement made by the person representing himself as JARVIS were unworthy of credit. Thus ends this farce of a second Robinson Crusoe.

Fires Last Evening.

At 6 o'clock a fire broke out in the rear of the building No. 95 Bleecker-street, occupied by ALFRED BLISS & CO., dealers in gas-fixtures. The loss sustained by the firm is estimated at $2,000. KINGMAN & MURPHY, dealers in furniture, who occupy No. 93, sustained slight loss by water.

At 8½ P.M. another fire occured on the first floor of No. 708 Broadway, occupied by J. M. AMBROSE, dealer in hair, who sustained a loss of $250. Insured in the North American and Phœnix, of Hartford.

At the same hour a third fire broke out in the three-story brick building, No. 91 Elm-street, occuied by JOHN J. MCCRUM, manufacturer of packing-boxes. The inflammable contents of the building gave the flame abundant food to feed upon, and the smoke was so dense that the firemen could scarcely get to work. The loss on stock and machinery was $1,000, and the building, owned by J. B. CORNELL, was damaged to the extent of $3,000, fully insured in the Star and Exchange.

Important Action of the Police Board.

MCDONALD from the Twenty-eighth to the Sixteenth, and Capt. THORNE from the Sixteenth to the Twenty-sixth. An order was also made discontinuing the general roundsmen, thirteen of whom were returned to precincts with the same rank, and the others remanded to post duty. Sergts. CHRISTIE and MINER, in command of the squads, were returned to precincts with the same rank, the first being sent to the Sixth and the latter to the Twenty-seventh. Sergt. ALDUS was also transferred from the Sixteenth to the Fifth, and Sergt. LONSDALL from the Twenty-seventh to the Second.

Probable Murder by a Gang of Young Thieves.

Monday afternoon a gang of seven or eight young thieves went on board of some rafts in Harsemus Cove, Jersey City, and after beating the watchman, JAMES BROWN, in a shocking manner, robbed him of his revolver, with which he attempted to defend himself. At noon, today, Dr. HADDEN reported to City Judge MARTINDALE that BROWN had sustained fractures of several ribs, besides severe internal injuries, and that in all probability he will die. The Judge proceeded to take BROWN'S deposition. Four of the boys are in custody.

On presenting the check at the First National Bank of Tarrytown the teller refused to cash it, unless he was identified, or the note was indorsed by some one in the village. The firm of SHANAGAN & COSTELLO, carriage makers, knew the man, and indorsed the check, which was pronounced a forgery. It was subsequently ascertained that GRIFFIN had been previously arrested in Brooklyn on a charge of larceny. Justice MANN committed him to the County Jail to await in examination.

The assault was made without any provocation. The woman was arrested.

LOUIS BERJAN, a Spanish gentleman doing business in New-York, has been in the habit of visiting a friend named WREAKS, at his home on South Fifth-street, Jersey City. On Monday afternoon he visited this gentleman and took dinner with him. The evening was spent in conversation and smoking, and BERJAN retired about 12 o'clock. On being called yesterday morning, and failing to answer, his room was entered and he was found dead, having shot himself through the heart. No reason was given for the act.

A young German woman yesterday appeared before Justice ROSE, of Newark, and desired a bill of separation, saying that her husband would not support her, but that another man would marry her.
